

PORTMANTEAU

PLAYS

BY

STUART WALKER

PS 3545 A54P6
1917

Cornell University Library

BOUGHT WITH THE INCOME OF THE

FISKE ENDOWMENT FUND

THE BEQUEST OF

Willard Fiske

LIBRARIAN OF THE UNIVERSITY 1868-1883

1905

A.369974

23/7/17

9206

Cornell University Library
PS 3545 .A54P6 1917

Portmanteau plays.

3 1924 021 510 601

0011

This book was digitized by Microsoft Corporation in cooperation with Cornell University Libraries, 2007.

You may use and print this copy in limited quantity for your personal purposes, but may not distribute or provide access to it (or modified or partial versions of it) for revenue-generating or other commercial purposes.

Cornell University Library

The original of this book is in the Cornell University Library.

There are no known copyright restrictions in the United States on the use of the text.

THE S. & K. DRAMATIC SERIES

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE THEATRE.

Anonymous. Net $1.00.

FOUR PLAYS OF THE FREE THEATRE.

Authorized Translation by Barrett H. Clark.
Preface by Brieux of the French Academy.

"The Fossils," a play in four acts, by François de Curel.

"The Serenade," a Bourgeois study in three acts, by Jean Jullien.

"Françoise Luck," a comedy in one act, by George de Porto-Riche.

"The Dupe," a comedy in five acts, by Georges Ancey. Net $1.50.

CONTEMPORARY FRENCH DRAMATISTS.

By Barrett H. Clark. Net $1.50.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS: LEAVES FROM A CRITIC'S SCRAP BOOK.

By Walter Prichard Eaton. Net $2.00.

THE ANTIGONE OF SOPHOCLES.

Prof. Joseph Edward Harry. Net $1.00.

EUROPEAN DRAMATISTS.

A Literary and Critical Appraisal of Strindberg, Ibsen, Maeterlinck, Wilde, Shaw and Barker. By Archibald Henderson, M.A., Ph.D. Net $2.00.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW: HIS LIFE AND WORKS.

By Archibald Henderson, M.A., Ph.D. Net $5.00.

SHORT PLAYS.

By Mary MacMillan. Net $1.50.

THE GIFT—A POETIC DRAMA.

By Margaret Douglas Rogers. Net $1.00.

COMEDIES OF WORDS AND OTHER PLAYS.

By Arthur Schnitzler. Translated by Pierre Loving. Net $1.50.

LUCKY PEHR.

By August Strindberg. Authorized Translation by Velma Swanston Howard. Net $1.50.

EASTER (A Play in Three Acts) AND STORIES.

By August Strindberg. Authorized Translation by Velma Swanston Howard. Net $1.50.

THE HAMLET PROBLEM AND ITS SOLUTION.

By Emerson Venable. Net $1.00.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS.

By Stuart Walker. Net $1.50.

See page 139 for description of above Books.

STEWART & KIDD COMPANY, PUBLISHERS, CINCINNATI.

From an original sketch by F. J. Zimmerer

THE PORTMANTEAU THEATER

Prologue

Memory

Device Bearer

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BY

STUART WALKER

Edited, and with an Introduction by

EDWARD HALE BIERSTADT

ILLUSTRATED

CINCINNATI
STEWART & KIDD COMPANY

1917

E.V.

A.369974

COPYRIGHT, 1917, BY STEWART & KIDD COMPANY
All rights reserved
COPYRIGHT IN ENGLAND

All dramatic rights reserved by Stuart Walker

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	PAGE
INTRODUCTION	iii
PROLOGUE TO THE THEATER	3
THE TRIMPLET	5
NEVERTHELESS	41
THE MEDICINE SHOW	69
THE SIX WHO PASS WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL .	85
APPENDIX	133

ILLUSTRATIONS

THE PORTMANTEAU THEATER . . .	(Frontispiece)	FACING PAGE
THE TRIMPLET
Caratina and her mother, Bobolara . . .		13
NEVERTHELESS
The Girl and Boy Encounter a Strange Word .		53
THE MEDICINE-SHOW
The Doctor "swaps" a chew of tobacco for a pill from Giz		79
SIX WHO PASS WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL
The Boy and the Ballad Singer		118
SIX WHO PASS WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL
The Queen, the defeated Headman, and the Boy		129
TAILPIECE
The Portmanteau Theater Boxed to Leave . .		139

THE MAN

Especially during the last two decades in America various movements have been generated for the establishment of a more or less permanent repertory theater. In most cases these movements have proved abortive; indeed, they have always proved abortive whenever actual permanency was implied. The failure of the New Theater, now the Century Theater, in New York, marks the highest point in a long series of failures. Next in line for consideration comes Stuart Walker's Portmanteau Theater. So far it has been entirely successful, and at the present moment there is no reason for prophesying anything but unqualified triumph for the venture. But in any case, whatever time may do to controvert the present situation, the Portmanteau Theater has taught us not one, but many lessons, and it seems entirely fitting that an effort should now be made to sum up in detail the history of the theater, in order that a proper basis for future deduction may be furnished. To do this effectively it will be well to begin with the presiding genius of the Portmanteau, Stuart Walker himself.

Stuart Walker was born in Augusta, Kentucky, in the oldest house in that part of the State. The exact date of his birth is problematical, as Mr. Walker has so far persisted in maintaining a strict secrecy on the point. Whether he thinks that he is too old or too young, I do not know; very evidently he believes there is a "too" somewhere in that connection. It seems to me a safe conjecture, however, that he is about thirty-three years old. His father was a lumberman, and with this exception all Mr. Walker's forbears on both sides of the house were either lawyers or preachers. There is not a trace of the artistic, much less theatric, talent discernible in his genealogy, and this is surely worthy of note considering his later career. The Walker family originates in North Carolina, not Kentucky, one of the chief reasons for the emigration being that one of Stuart Walker's ancestors had a family of twenty-two children. Naturally North Carolina felt the strain of so large a body of Walkers, and Stuart's forbear moved south near the blue grass country.

INTRODUCTION

Mr. Walker's early childhood was uneventful. He was a strongly imaginative youngster. The chief point of interest during this period came as a more or less direct result of an attack of measles. It was at this time that his father gave him a toy theater in the endeavor to keep the boy indoors and quiet during his convalescence. He was just six years old. The theater was of German manufacture, and it had a green baize curtain, two sets of scenery, and real, though miniature, traps. There came with it also a play to be performed, but the play was written in German, and there was no one at hand who could translate German readily. So it was that Stuart's father made him an adaptation, a very free adaptation, of the "Bohemian Girl." This version was especially notable because it had two morals: the reward of virtue, and the condemnation of vice. Thus every one was satisfied. For six years the small boy gave regular performances of his one piece in the little theater, and then the audience rose in a body and demanded a change of bill. Here was a problem indeed for the Manager! Stuart rose to the occasion. He repainted the theater, changed the name of the play — and gave it over again. There was almost a riot. The question now was how to hold his audience, and the answer could be only one — repertory. The "star system" fortunately could not apply in this instance. And so Stuart wrote a play a week thereafter, and gave it on Monday afternoon just as he is doing today. The influence of this toy theater on Mr. Walker's future work can hardly be over emphasized. It taught him how to hold an audience, it suggested the importance of the repertory idea, and from a standpoint of stage mechanics it gave him material which he is using today. That will be taken up in detail a little further on. The plays he wrote for his fellows were designed to please — they had to please, and the experience gained through their manufacture and presentation has been an ever-present help up to now.

INTRODUCTION

In 1890 the Walker family moved to Cincinnati. Here Stuart entered the elementary school, going from there to the High School, and to the University of Cincinnati, where he graduated in due course. While he was an undergraduate at the University he was one of the founders of the

INTRODUCTION

Comedy Club, and this served to intensify his interests along the lines of the theater. It was at this time, too, that he came under the influence of Prof. George Miller of the English Department. It was through Professor Miller that Walker became first interested and then fascinated by the old English and Scottish ballads. Their dramatic power, their skill of narration, and their ability to make the auditor actually see and feel the events they recounted, made a deep and lasting impression. It was an early and primitive form of the dramatic art, this minstrelsy, and it suggested the fundamental principles of that art as perhaps little else could have done.

After his graduation from the University Mr. Walker was an invalid for several years. He had nothing to do but to think, and this formative period permitted the crystallization of ideas which had been germinating since boyhood. When he was strong enough, in an effort to recover his lost health, Mr. Walker went back south and worked some months in a great lumber camp. Here he came into contact with the Southern negro, and through him found again the ballad of his university days. At night, by the campfire, the darkies would chant their songs, each one taking up the theme in turn and acting out the story. Sometimes these assumed almost the proportion of impromptu plays — the Commedia dell'Arte over again! Mr. Walker listened, and learned. He has always been peculiar in his ability to reduce anything to its common denominator, and to put it into practical application. After his lumbering experience Mr.

INTRODUCTION

Walker headed straight north to New York, and entered at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts. Now was the time for dreams to be realized.

After graduating from the Academy Mr. Walker played a summer in pantomime with Madame Alberti, and the following Autumn he applied for work at the Belasco offices. There he was taken on at once — at $12.50 a week — and William J. Dean, the general director for Mr. Belasco, told him he would have five lines to speak in a forthcoming production. The young Thespian banished thoughts of Hamlet — oh, yes, he had remembered that Booth was a Southerner — and took the part. The five lines were in "Is Matrimony a Failure?" and on the first night Walker was made assistant stage manager. After two weeks he was made stage manager of "The Lily" at $20 a week, and then on he went. He understudied all the important male parts in "The Lily" and in time played most of them, one night taking the place of Leo Ditrichstein who was ill. The next Autumn he went back to "Is Matrimony a Failure?" and played the part of the old man, but after two weeks he accepted the position of play-reader for Belasco. Next he was made stage manager of "The Concert," and manager of the Belasco Play Bureau. Again Mr. Walker took a step up, being made general stage manager; and all the time he was acting in whatever production of Mr. Belasco's he was needed. Shortly after this last move Mr. Dean became ill, and Mr. Walker took over his work continuing with it as general director for Belasco during the next year when he resigned to play for a summer in stock with Jessie Bonstelle. The following Autumn the Portmanteau Theater came into being. This was in 1914 after Mr. Walker had been with Belasco for six years. During all this time there were people who, to use Mr. Walker's own phrase, were "kind to me, and told me things." Among these were first of all William J. Dean whose friendly interest never lessened, then W. J. Ferguson, James Bradbury, Jane Cowl, and others in the cast of "Is Matrimony a Failure?"; in "The Lily," Nance O'Neil, and Julia Dean, with Leo Ditrichstein, William Morris, Bruce McRae, and Charles Cartwright. But Mr. Dean was always the greatest friend of all.

INTRODUCTION

✓ The average man after six years with Belasco would have succumbed to the Belascian style of production, but with Mr. Walker it taught him largely what to avoid. He had his own standards on his entrance to the work, and he adhered to them persistently, discarding whatever failed to meet the test. Perhaps the most vital thing he learned was how to train and handle actors, for in this Belasco is a past-master. Also as director, Mr. Walker came in close touch with a great part of the "profession," and when his time came he was able to draw upon his accumulated experience to provide himself with a company. He saw how the younger actors and actresses were passed over, unless by some chance they were able to show their talent, and he resolved that when his own day dawned he would make his knowledge react to their advantage and to his own. This made possible the incident that took place just after the first performance of the Portmanteau when a very well-known New York manager rushed up to Mr. Walker and exclaimed, "Walker, where did you get that cast? I never heard of one of 'em before — but they're wonders!" Looking at him rather sadly Mr. Walker replied, "I got six of them out of your companies."

INTRODUCTION

Chesterton remarks that the poet is the only really practical man, and this is certainly true of Stuart Walker. He has to a remarkable degree the power of materializing his own visions. His practical experience with the stage has not been wasted; he has dreamed, and he has made his dreams come true. Perhaps this is in part because of his great faith in them, but the concrete knowledge necessary to achieve their embodiment is there too. His taste, his judgment, are inherent, but the ability to make definite use of them has been arduously acquired.

THE THEATER

It was in the Autumn of 1914 that the idea for the Portmanteau Theater first came to Mr. Walker. He himself says that it came to him while he was taking a bath. This is so frivolous a statement that it is undoubtedly true. After all, stranger things have happened. Mr. Walker says, too, that the idea came to him as a complete vision, with every salient feature in its place just as it is now. This sounds like the poet talking, but even so that is no reason for doubting. At least he believes it. As a matter of fact, like most visions, the idea came to birth after a long period of almost unconscious incubation, beginning no doubt with the toy theater of childhood. Certain it is at any rate that when Mr. Walker first came to New York he wanted to do three things — to write, to act, and to produce plays, and it is equally certain that all these three wishes were finally realized in the Portmanteau Theater.

INTRODUCTION

Shortly after the idea had begun to take shape in Mr. Walker's mind he went to a convention of the Drama League where he met Mrs. Coonley Ward with whom he discussed his new-born project. Mrs. Ward took fire at once, so much so in fact that she sent Mr. Walker on a tour through the Middle West so that he might talk publicly about the Portmanteau and gain some idea of how such a theater would be received. On this tour Mr. Walker met with instant response. He felt now that he was committed to venture, and so without more delay he returned to New York, built the theater and organized his company. This was in the Spring of 1915.

According to Mr. Walker one of the first to catch the spirit of the thing was William J. Sheafe, Jr., and it was he who built the first model for the theater. The first scene was made for "Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil," and it was about this time that Frank J. Zimmerer and Wilmot Heitland put in an appearance. Both of these men did, and indeed are doing, splendid work for the Portmanteau. It was Mr. Zimmerer who found the color for the theater itself, and his stage settings for the plays of Lord Dun-sany, as well as those for the plays of Mr. Walker, have since set New York by the ears. In every instance Mr. Walker has displayed an almost uncanny knack for getting just the right people to execute his ideas. This is indeed borne out in every phase of the work, artistic and mechanical. And again in almost every instance the people he has found have been hitherto quite unknown to the general public.

INTRODUCTION

The proportions of the theater are based, according to the inventor's own statement, on the west wall of the apartment Mr. Walker occupied at that time, and this simply means that the proportions are, to a certain extent, arbitrary. Later they were worked out in greater detail as slight changes became necessary. The theater as it was finally built, however, was, and is, strictly according to Mr. Walker's primary conception.

The Portmanteau Theater is in direct descent from the toy theater about which so much has already been said. The structural outlines of the theater are largely the same, the same three color lighting system is employed, the stand-lights are used in exactly the same manner, and the improved reflectors are almost replicas. It was in the toy theater that Mr. Walker first learned that footlights cast unpleasant shadows, and he discarded them then. Later he relearned that lesson as well as others under Belasco, but they had first come to him years before. The greatest point of interest here, however, is that the lighting system for the Portmanteau Theater is unique. Mr. Walker can get effects with it that cannot be duplicated in any theater in the country.

INTRODUCTION

Yet this lighting system which has been hailed as so notable an achievement, as indeed it is, is based directly upon the system used in the little toy theater with the green baize curtain.

In 1915 Hiram Kelly Moderwell, author of "The Theater of Today" and at that time on the staff of the Boston Evening Transcript wrote an account of the Portmanteau Theater from which I shall quote at some length, for I cannot hope to better Mr. Moderwell's narrative.

"The Portmanteau Theater is a complete theatrical stage, somewhat smaller than usual, but ample for any play that does not make a special demand for 'bigness.' It can be set up in any room sixteen and a half feet high, twenty-five feet wide, and forty feet long (this length allowing for an audience of a hundred or more). Its walls support themselves by a resourceful system of interlocking, and ground bracing. They can be 'struck,' like scenery, by a few men, and boxed in an hour and a half. When boxed for shipping, the theater, with switchboard and all paraphernalia, weighs some 3,000 pounds, occupies 735 cubic feet, and can be loaded on to an ordinary hauling truck. The box of dimmers is a little marvel. It is forty-four inches long, thirty-two inches high, twenty-three inches deep, and weighs 350 pounds boxed. It can plug in on the ordinary 110 direct current system, which fact enables the theater to dispense with clumsy calcium devices. Mr. Walker dispenses altogether with footlights, not from necessity, but from choice. His lighting is obtained from movable spot lamps, and transparencies provide all needed coloring.

INTRODUCTION

"The stage proper is sixteen feet high, eighteen feet deep, and twenty-two feet wide. The gridiron, from which scenery is hung, is a remarkable contrivance, light and flexible, but to all appearances quite free from all danger of breaking. A cloth cyclorama is hung on a semi-circular iron shaft, and is used for the background in out-of-door scenes, as in the best European theaters. There is an oblong fore-stage or apron in front of the proscenium and between two side entrance doorways, and here, in chummy nearness to his audience, Mr. Walker has large portions of his plays acted. The wings are ample for the storing of properties between scenes, and for the sojourn of actors awaiting their cues. Some of the framework of the stage is constructed of the actual boxes in which the rest is stored and shipped.

"Mr. Walker uses this stage with a keen sense of the beautiful. If he chose he could mount an ordinary realistic play in the realistic manner — the equipment will lend itself to that. But in the performances thus far given the producer has set himself to the exposition of his ideals of stagecraft. These are perhaps summarized in the formula: 'Imagination instead of information.' But Mr. Walker's personal taste narrows down still more toward the delicate and fanciful. And in this field at least, the Portmanteau should be able to equal any theater in America, provided only that the physical demands of the play be not exorbitant. The scenery in the Portmanteau is of the simplest description — back drops, ordinary sets, and a few properties. It is the lighting (which must in all imaginative work be a full half of the setting) that raises these prosaic things into the domain of magic. Mr. Walker's lighting is a simple affair of movable spots, nothing more. (We have Mr. Belasco to thank for showing us the marvels of the spot-light.) But by his extensive understanding of color in light, and especially of light against pigment, he produces effects of great beauty and distinction."

INTRODUCTION

There are several points in Mr. Moderwell's account which may in the light of later events be clarified to advantage. It is interesting to remark that when the Portmanteau was set up in the Century Theater of New York Mr. Walker discarded the famous "million dollar switch-board" of the Century, finding that he could get better effects with his own switch-board, and little dimmer-box. The Century, that gigantic mausoleum of incompetency, is a monument to the conception that money can supply anything except brains. It should be noticed too that the fore-stage of the Portmanteau is unlike the conventional apron in that it is one step lower than the main or inner stage. When Mr. Moderwell speaks of the scenery as being "of the simplest description," he is speaking from a mechanical rather than from an artistic standpoint. Also it must be remembered that his account was written in the very early days of the Portmanteau before Zimmerer's gorgeous sets for the Dunsany plays, or for "The Birthday of the Infanta."

The fore-stage, and the inner stage of the

INTRODUCTION

Portmanteau are lighted by four stand-lights — two for each stage. These stands carry one lamp each of 250 watts, behind which is an exceedingly powerful mirror reflector. The two lights for the fore-stage are placed down stage right and left, and are masked from the audience by screens. The two lights for the inner stage are placed just inside the proscenium. It is evident at once that there can be no question of unpleasant shadow effects with this method. As Mr. Moderwell says, movable spots are used also, but this is true only on occasion. Mr. Walker relies on reflections, and color combinations to bring most of his results. Heretofore to obtain the diffuse light necessary for a full stage, balcony spots have been used (Granville Barker relies on these to a great extent), but with the single lamp used in combination with the reflectors the Portmanteau manages to obtain a diffuse light from nearby, a thing new in staging. I have called these lights "stand-lights" because they do not come under the head of any other light used on the stage prior to their creation by Mr. Walker. They differ from the bunch-light simply in that only one bulb is used, and that the reflector is an unusually powerful one constructed by Mr. Walker particularly for this purpose.

Mr. Walker's general theory of staging is very simple. If you have a story to tell — tell it. Do not bury it in a mass of detail which is unessential. Go for the broad effects, the big outlines; the rest will be added as it becomes necessary. That is one of the things Belasco did not teach the producer. You must remember also that the audience is an integral part of the whole. It must be willing to enter in and do its share. The part of an audience which will do this is worth working for, and the other part will come anyhow — they will follow the rest.

INTRODUCTION

Simplicity is the keynote, and the knowledge when it will be more effective not to do a thing than to do it. "Nevertheless" is a masterpiece of omission, and it has been remarked that the characters of Mother and Father who never come on the stage at all are as real to the audience as the Boy or Girl. It is in connection with this play that some misguided people have tried to trace a tendency on Mr. Walker's part to return to the Elizabethan stage as the Device Bearer brings out the table, the lamp, and the chairs which go to make the set against the closed curtains of the inner stage. It is simply a question of practicability. The fore-stage cannot be curtained off, and as it must be set for this "Interlude before the Curtains" it is simply a matter of setting it in the most artistic way. Better the Device Bearer than the Props of the "Yellow Jacket" with his limp cigarette.

The point should be stressed again that Mr. Walker considers the audience and the stage as a unit. The fore-stage is significant of this attitude in the degree of intimacy it permits; indeed it may be considered as the connecting link between the stage proper and the auditorium. In some of Mr. Walker's plays the characters descend into the audience in the effort to weld the real and the make-believe into an indivisible whole. Memory as she walks down the center aisle to the stage, and the Prologue as he answers questions, both tend to carry out this theory. You, or the person in the audience, is of course a definite character in several of the plays, but sometimes a youngster in the house will pipe up and ask the Prologue questions on his own account. This never fails to fill Mr. Walker with joy, and the Prologue himself with perturbation, but so far the illusion has never been lost, no matter how severe a strain was put upon the ingenuity of the players.

INTRODUCTION

Some persons, equally misguided with those before mentioned, have exclaimed that Mr. Walker in his attitude toward the audience has attempted to reinstitute some of the conventions of the Greek stage, and one critic has remarked that the "trick" was borrowed straight from vaudeville. The absurdity of both these statements is manifest. The consideration of the stage and the audience as a unit, and the effort to emphasize that point in every possible manner is as old as the stage itself. It is one of the early fundamentals of stagecraft, and the list would be endless of the times when it has been attempted. "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" is the most obvious example. There is not space here to elucidate this theory, but that it is of the highest importance is unquestionable.

In his directing, Mr. Walker makes certain demands, and adopts certain methods which are interesting, less in themselves, than in the results to which they give rise. He insists that every member of a cast shall know what the play is about.

INTRODUCTION

He reads the play with them together and separately; he discusses it with them until all the individual conceptions become unified in the whole. One of his chief personal exactions is that actors shall be treated not as actors but as human beings, and the result is that every member of his company is a friend upon whom he can depend for the fullest support, and the heartiest coöperation. In rehearsing a new play Mr. Walker permits every one to work out his own ideas so far as it is possible (herein is a trace of the Belasco training), and a little later in the work the process of unifying the individual interpretations, and correcting them in so far as they need correction, is taken in hand. As a whole the Portmanteau company may be said to read excellently, that is, better than most American companies, and not so well as most English. Seldom a word is lost, and their reading of verse is quite remarkable considering what we are usually obliged to put up with. Both in diction and in enunciation the company will bear comparison with the best this country has to offer. Their acting is finished, and may be compared to the Irish Players in that the greatest effect is secured with the least effort. All this is to say that Mr. Walker has exhibited extraordinary ability in the training of his company. Every one of the young and unknown actors who have come into his charge has since received offers from Broadway managers, but only one or two have succumbed to the temptation.

Mr. Walker's effort is always to create through the audience rather than through the actors. He provides all the outline of illusion with all the necessary suggestion, leaving the audience to fill in the details for themselves. This places upon them a direct necessity for coming into the picture, to create for themselves, besides responding to the creation of others. And as I have said before, the part of an audience which will do this is worth working for — and it is no small part. In “Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil” a great copper pot is placed on the fore-stage. The audience is told that the pot is on a fire and that it is full of boiling water. All through the performance the audience may be heard to gasp audibly whenever any one comes near enough to the pot to be in danger of being scalded. In “The Lady of the Weeping Willow Tree” a young girl kneels by the bank of a river crooning a quiet little song, as she sorrows over her mother. There is no river, and there is no action, and there is no mother, but, nine times out of ten, the audience have entered so fully into the spirit of the scene that they have been moved to tears. Can the realistic stage setting better this? It may be quite truly said that Mr. Walker has shown what can be done with the new stage art far more effectively than any other producer in America. In conception and in execution he has proved to the utmost that an ounce of artistic suggestion sympathetically applied is worth a pound of realistic reproduction. The first of these stimulates the imagination; the second stultifies it.

INTRODUCTION

It must not be thought, however, that Mr. Walker is omnipotent or that the Portmanteau Theater is a cure-all for the woes of the stage.

INTRODUCTION

One becomes so surfeited with mediocrity that the advent of the new and beautiful is apt to be hailed as the very criterion of excellence, and consequently over-rated. Nothing could be more destructive to the well being of any movement than this attitude, for there inevitably follows in its wake a reaction which often undoes all the good that has been accomplished. The Portmanteau has very definite limitations. It cannot attempt to compete with the legitimate theater in many of its phases. Such competition is not necessary. The Portmanteau Theater has its place, and within the confines of its limitations it must exercise what influence it can bring to bear. It cannot be otherwise considered, and in my praise of its activities it must always be borne in mind that such statements are relative, not absolute. The Portmanteau stage is small, and is naturally not to be compared with a full-sized stage which is equipped with every device of contemporary stage-craft. It is in the acceptance of its self-imposed limitations, and in the turning of them to advantage that the Portmanteau derives no small part of its importance. It should be considered not in any sense as a Messiah, but simply as a Prophet.

THE PLAYS

The first play in his present repertory which Mr. Walker wrote was "The Moon Lady," a pantomime written in 1908, six years before the theater itself came into being. The list of the other plays, all of them written especially for the Portmanteau, follows with the time of writing.

INTRODUCTION

"Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil,"
March 29th - April 1st, 1915.

"The Trimplet," June 26th - 29th, 1915.

"The Seven Gifts," a pantomime, December 7th, 1915.

"Nevertheless," December 31st, 1915.

"The Lady of the Weeping Willow Tree," February 6th - 16th, 1916.

"The Birthday of the Infanta," July 19th - 20th, 1916.

"The Very Naked Boy," September 3rd, 1916.

"The Medicine Show," September 5th, 1916.

It may fairly be said that although the ideas for some of these plays had been in Mr. Walker's mind for some time, they might never have reached the dignity of paper had it not been for the building of the Portmanteau. From the very first Mr. Walker was strongly disinclined to use plays without paying royalty, and his circumstances at that time did not permit such payment. Obviously the only thing to do was to write his own plays, and this he did.

The point of view from which the plays are written is easy of explanation. Tell the story — that is the sole secret; no, there is one other — first have a story to tell. Mr. Walker denies the charge of symbolism energetically, and herein he is at one with Lord Dunsany who has suffered under a like burden. For the most part we can concur with Mr. Walker in his contention that his plays are without ulterior motive: it is only when such a frankly symbolic piece as "The Trimplet" is brought into the discussion that we waver. But "The Trimplet" stands alone after all in its symbolism, if symbolism it be. The story is the important part to Mr. Walker, and it is the important part to most of his audiences. If the others are able to get something more from the play so much the better, but the vital fact is that they get the story first. The symbolism is secondary when it is present at all.

INTRODUCTION

At least half of the plays are social satires of a mild form, so mild indeed that one has almost to look for the satire. "Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil" is the best example of this phase, as "The Trimplet" (unquestionably Mr. Walker's finest play) is the best example of his more purely poetic vein. "The Trimplet" deals with a certain magic thing which can cure all the ills of whoever finds it. The search and the finding constitute the action of the piece. "Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil" is perhaps the most popular play in the Portmanteau repertory. The story is of a Queen who, having stepped on the ring-toe of the King's great-aunt, is condemned to die before the King's four clocks strike twelve. The Six who pass the pot, in which boil the lentils, are on their way to the beheading. "Nevertheless," an interlude played before the curtains on the fore-stage, tells of a burglar who reaches regeneration through two children and a dictionary. This play is a point of contention. It is liked and disliked in turn by critics and audiences. The key to the problem, however, is in the point of view which is brought to bear on the play. If one looks at it in the cold gray light of middle-aged inexperience it is doubtless a rather tedious trifle, but if one's eyes are those of childhood where "every one lives happy ever after" and an all-abiding faith in the ultimate fitness of things is the chief tenet of one's convictions — one will like the play. And this commentary is true in a greater or less degree of all Mr. Walker's work. "The Medicine Show" is a character study from the banks of the Ohio River. One does not see either the show or the river, but that does not matter. This play is a relic of the days in Augusta, Kentucky. Every word spoken by the three characters was heard at some time by the author as he lay, a small boy, on the banks of the great river. Its local color is exact to a degree, and its characterization is equally authentic, but that does not prevent it from being amusing. That it is true to life is well borne out by the fact that the play was received with the utmost enthusiasm in that part of the world where the characters were known and appreciated. New England took the piece coldly: Giz and Lut'er were too dirty for New England. "The Seven Gifts," a pantomime, was played for the first time in Madison Square, New York City, on Christmas night, 1915. The Theater was set up in the Square and a crowd of more than 5000 stood in the snow to see the performance. The players were warmed by heaters placed underneath the stage, and the heat so generated became at times so intense that they were in danger in being parboiled, though the temperature was near the freezing mark. Nevertheless the audience of 5000 stood patiently in the cold dark to which they were seemingly oblivious as they watched in fascinated wonder. "The Lady of the Weeping Willow Tree" is a play of old Japan, and many of the lines are taken from old Japanese songs, and legends with which the western world is not familiar. The play is a sad little tale; so sad, indeed, that I have known a hardened press-agent to weep over it as he read the manuscript. And a greater tribute than this would be impossible in my opinion! But though it is sad it is beautiful, and it is the only play Mr. Walker has written in more than one act. "The Very Naked Boy" is another interlude of rapid action. The play is not as fine as the others, however, either in conception or in the working out of the little episode on which it is based. "The Birthday of the Infanta," is an adaptation from a story of Oscar Wilde's. The original is full of dramatic incident and lends itself peculiarly to the treatment accorded it. The play has been successful from the very start. It is notable that Alfred Noyes used the same story for his poem "The Dwarf's Tragedy," one of his most poignantly beautiful creations. Mr. Walker's conception does the original full justice, and more than that no one can say. The staging of this piece is particularly fine with costumes by Mrs. John W. Alexander from original Velasquez portraits, and the set by Frank J. Zimmerer. Mr. Walker has several plays in preparation notably "A Leaf in the Wind," a peace play in which there is no mention of war, and "The Window Garden" the story of a little cripple in the slums of a great city. As will be seen by the list of plays with the dates of writing Mr. Walker is a rapid workman, but that is not always true. "The Window Garden" has been rewritten six times so far, but when it is done it will be as it was always intended.

INTRODUCTION

INTRODUCTION

INTRODUCTION

Mr. Walker's attitude toward the writing of his plays, his emphasis on the importance of telling the story, may be traced in some part to the old English and Scottish ballads which influenced him so greatly in his earlier youth. The same fundamentals are apparent in each; the narrative, the color and clarity of outline, and the same tendency to bring the audience into active cooperation all proceed from the same source. But it is never plot for plot's sake with Mr. Walker. The plot grows out of the characters inevitably as it should grow, but the plot never controls the characters. It is characterization first, last, and all the time, and the characters tell the story. The length of the plays is entirely unconventional from a theatrical standpoint. Some of them play twenty minutes, and some play fifty. It depends solely on the story that is to be told. There is neither cutting to make it shorter nor padding to make it longer. The play dictates its own length by its own requirements. It has been asked whether the plays have been influenced by the theater. Physically they have not. That is to say that the plays are in no sense unconventional because the theater itself is unconventional. Realistic plays could be staged in the Portmanteau just as effectively as the poetic and more fanciful drama. But it is quite probable that in writing his plays Mr. Walker has always thought of them in terms of the Portmanteau, though this does not mean that any very pronounced limitation has been imposed upon them. Rather otherwise, in so far as theatrical effects are concerned.

INTRODUCTION

Mr. Walker, like Mr. Chesterton, does and says the extraordinary thing because it is the logical thing. Herein he is at one with the child mind, and herein lies no small measure of his importance. The creation of the Prologue, the Device Bearer, and the You, in the audience, bear witness to this very clearly. The Prologue, who answers questions from the audience, and You who asks them, have both a very definite reason. There are usually people in the theater who talk during a performance, thus making themselves a nuisance to all around them. One dislikes them because they distract one's attention from the stage, and too because one involuntarily tries unsuccessfully to hear what they are saying. Now we have questions asked and answered so that the whole theater can hear. The performance is undisturbed, and so is the audience. (There is discernible, however, a touch of satire in the conception.) And the Prologue to the Theater chanted by Memory, as well as the prologues to the separate plays spoken by the Prologue himself are for the people who must know exactly what it is all about. What better method could there be of telling them? The Prologue to the Theater is interesting in itself as having originally no connection with the Portmanteau. It was written in 1912 as the prologue to a book which was never published, and when the theater was built it became available. It is an exquisite bit of prose, comparable to Dunsany in its poetry of thought and of expression.

INTRODUCTION

In his plays Mr. Walker has reached the same conclusion that every really worth-while, imaginative writer has reached in the course of centuries, namely that the child mind and the adult mind are fundamentally the same, and are thus subject to the same reaction and the same response. If the adult perception can once be induced to cast loose the bonds of custom, conventionality, and sophistry which have been grafted on imperceptibly through the course of years, and reach to the horizon of the child mind, we have every possibility of a very high form of art. A child reading a fairy tale perceives nothing beyond the story itself, and is consequently satisfied providing the tale be adequate, but the more mature intelligence immediately translates the characters and incidents into symbols of abstract qualities, acquiring thereby an emotional stimulus not only on the imaginative but also on the spiritual side. Sometimes this is carried to extremes and we have a frantic search for symbolism where none is intended, an inability to accept the story for the story's sake,—it is this among other things with which Mr. Walker is contending. The child mind is, relatively speaking, infinite, and the word infinite brings us at once to universality, that quality upon which all true art is founded as upon a rock. Mr. Walker has cut through to fundamentals in his work, and it is that which makes him worthy of especial attention. Only his terminology is strange, even while it possesses that delicate charm which only an artist with his point of view could give it.

INTRODUCTION

I do not mean that Mr. Walker's type of play will be all things to all men. It will not, and cannot be, nor is it even intended that it should. It will always fall short on the purely intellectual side, and those persons who derive their sole enjoyment from an intellectual stimulus will always come away unsatisfied. Beyond question one of the reasons for the marked success of this type of play at present is simply that the inevitable reaction has set in against the play of pure observation as opposed to that of pure imagination. One side of our natures has been greatly neglected, and that side is now coming into its own as a plant blooms under watering. When the pendulum has swung too far we shall again react. It is unfortunate that only once in an age comes that genius who can combine successfully the seen and the unseen, the actual and the real. And although within their scope Mr. Walker's plays are of especial significance, that scope is admittedly small. One cannot compare "Alice in Wonderland" with the "Odyssey." And by the way, here is an interesting point — Mr. Walker has never read a line of Lewis Carroll; he has not even looked at the pictures! This absolves him of the accusation of imitation at any rate. It would be absurd to point out these pieces written for the Portmanteau as masterpieces either of literature or of the dramatic art, but within their scope, admitting their obvious restrictions, they are significant both in themselves and as an exposition of certain artistic theories of importance.

INTRODUCTION

THE RESULT

The first performances in the Portmanteau Theater were given at Christodora House, a settlement on Avenue B, New York City. The reason for this was that Mr. Walker had been interested in the activities of Christodora House for some time, and intended to establish there by means of the Portmanteau a community theater somewhat like the Neighborhood Playhouse in Grand Street. At the last moment, however, this idea proved impracticable, and several invitation performances were given instead to which professional people of importance were invited. The success was instantaneous. Critics, managers, and amateurs alike came, saw, and were conquered. The bill for these initial performances consisted of "The Trimplet," "The Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil," and "A Fan and Two Candlesticks" by Mary MacMillan. The cast was composed of young professionals whom Mr. Walker had interested in the venture, and who in their enthusiasm contributed their services free of charge. It was worth their while to have such an opportunity of showing their talent, instead of remaining buried at the bottom of a Broadway company. Not one of them ever regretted the gamble if such it could be deemed. These performances were given on July 14th, 15th, and 21st, 1915, and from then on until Christmas Mr. Walker fought illness and prepared as best he could for the coming year. He now had the theater, the company, and sufficient plays with which to open a repertory season.

INTRODUCTION

On Christmas night the Portmanteau was set up in Madison Square, and a performance of "The Seven Gifts," a pantomime, was given, and after this the Portmanteau took its place in the ranks. The first professional or paid performance was in Boston on February 14th, 1916, and after that the company was taken on tour through New England, as far west as Chicago, and as far south as Washington. The tour was somewhat in the nature of a triumphal march (in all my life I have never seen such notices and so many of them) and Mr. Walker brought his theater back to New York reinvigorated, and ready to try to crack the hardest nut of all — New York itself. By this time the Portmanteau had found its feet. In the Christodora House it had been tried on professionals, and had been eagerly accepted; now during the tour it had played in great cities, and in small towns, before audiences composed of the 400 and audiences composed of the 4,000,000, and it had gone equally well with rich and poor, young and old. Children adored the theater and the plays, and grown-ups had come to patronise and remained to applaud. It was now certain that a universal chord had been struck, and that success of the theater was assured.

In the summer of 1916 the Portmanteau was taken to Wyoming, New York, and here the new plays were tried out and the repertory for the coming season whipped into shape. The next October another and shorter tour through New England was arranged which was carried out with a repetition of the first success. It may be said here that fully nine-tenths of the initial bookings for the

INTRODUCTION

Portmanteau have been renewed, and in nearly every instance for a longer run than was first given. On November 27th, 1916, the Portmanteau opened at the Thirty-ninth Street Theater, New York, and after remaining there two weeks, changed to the Princess Theater just across the street, where it played until January 6th, 1917. It could have played out the season there except for the fact that bookings had been arranged which made it imperative to close at the stated time. After January 6th the theater started on a coast-to-coast tour from which it returns in April, and the history of which is yet to be written.

It had been considered highly undesirable to place the Portmanteau in direct competition with the Broadway theaters during the New York run, and so at the Thirty-ninth Street Theater there were no evening performances, and only four matinées a week, with one morning performance for children on Saturday. This last, however, was not successful and was shortly discontinued. On moving to the Princess Theater the demand was so great that Mr. Walker was obliged to play not only every afternoon, but also every evening, a total of twelve performances a week. And the houses to which the Portmanteau played were usually full. No mere fad could have made such a record. It is absolute proof of the intrinsic worth of the Portmanteau productions that the second largest and the most incredulous city in the world should have given it the response it did. The Portmanteau Theater was set on the stage of the larger theater, and this occasionally puzzled the audience, but there seemed no feasible method of obviating the difficulty though Mr. Walker labored long and earnestly at the problem. The New York run was rendered notable especially because of the production of three plays by Lord Dunsany two of which had not hitherto been performed professionally in America. The sets for these plays, as indeed the sets for the rest of the repertory, are surpassed by little that had been done in America so far. All but three of the sets have been made by Mr. Zimmerer who also did some of the sets for the Neighborhood Playhouse. Mr. Zimmerer has done all the sets and costumes for the Portmanteau productions with the following exceptions, the set for "Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil" was made by William J. Sheafe, Jr., who also made the first model of the theater itself, and the costumes for the same play were designed by Wilmot Heitland who also designed the scenery and costumes for "Gammer Gurton's Nedle," and "The Lady of the Weeping Willow Tree." The costumes for "The Birthday of the Infanta" were designed by Mrs. John W. Alexander. With these exceptions Mr. Zimmerer has had the field to himself, and splendid use he has made of it. I do not intend in any sense to depreciate the work done by others in favor of Mr. Zimmerer — their achievements are too distinguished to permit that — but Mr. Zimmerer as a member of the company, and as scenic director of the theater is surely entitled to the major portion of the credit.

INTRODUCTION

It was early in 1916 when Mr. Walker placed the business management of the Portmanteau in the hands of Maximilian Elser, Jr., and Russell Janney, both of them young, enthusiastic and entirely fitted to assume such control. And just here let me say that any rumors concerning the financial backing of the Portmanteau by any one are entirely without foundation. That is one of the most remarkable and important features of its progress. At the outset Mr. Walker borrowed $3,000 on his personal note, and at a ruinous rate of interest, and up to December, 1916, every penny that was put into the Portmanteau came out of Mr. Walker's own pocket. He received offers of backing time and again, but he refused them because he felt that his salvation lay in perfect freedom. With the exception of the $3,000 mentioned the Portmanteau paid its own way. It did more than that. In the Spring of 1916 it showed a profit of twenty per cent. on the investment to date. And yet it is an "uncommercial" theater! Surely it is uncommercial in that it does not cater to "the tired business man," but just as surely the theater is commercial from a financial standpoint. It has not been able to pay for the mass of publicity accorded other productions, but no other production has been given the enormous amount of publicity accorded the Portmanteau. And that is because it is important in itself, able to stand on its own feet, and make its own way in the world.

INTRODUCTION

The response to most of the plays has been very even no matter what the character or the situation of the audience, but one or two of the plays present rather amusing problems. "The Trimplet " is one of the favorite pieces with the public. It has always gone well, yet it is the one piece the critics unite in damning! And too "Gammer Gurton's Nedle," the earliest example of English comedy, included in every university course on the history of the drama, has been a failure from the start in the colleges, but has taken by storm New York, where it was played nineteen times in two weeks. Strange, is it not?

INTRODUCTION

Particularly in view of what I have already said about the stage settings for the Portmanteau productions, it is interesting to note what some of them cost. One play cost nothing whatever to stage, one play cost $52, one cost $300, and one cost $1500. It is not necessary to go all through the list, for these four are representative. It should be observed, however, that the play with practically no setting at all, which cost nothing, has had a success equal to that of the play that cost $1500 to produce (which sum is the largest ever expended by Mr. Walker on a production).

I desire again to make here the point that the appeal of the Portmanteau has not been confined to any one class or to any one age of persons. It is this peculiar universality of appeal which makes the Portmanteau of importance both from a theatrical and dramatic standpoint. I should like also to point out one thing that I have noticed about Portmanteau audiences,—men are quicker to get into the spirit of the thing than women. The women are usually a little hesitant, and self-conscious, while the men lose all thought of self in their enjoyment of what is before them. Perhaps this is because men always retain a large, healthy strain of the "little-boy" spirit while women have but little if any of the "little-girl." And too a little boy is a known and loved factor in the scheme of things, but a little girl — is there such a thing?

INTRODUCTION

The reason for the Portmanteau Theater itself as differentiated from its productions may be easily summed up in the statement that it permits its director absolute freedom. He can in an almost literal sense take up his theater and walk. He is bound down by none of the inconveniences that beset the ordinary play house. When he goes on tour his scenery always fits the stage because it is always the same stage. He can play where there is no theater if there is a hall, or a barn or a ball-room in which he can set up his equipment. I have been asked whether in the original conception of the Portmanteau there was not an auditorium included. No, never. And hence in a certain sense the Portmanteau is not a theater at all. It is simply a stage with all the appurtenances of one. The Portmanteau Theater proves once for all how easily and simply, and yet how artistically and effectively, things can be done. It is not "highbrow" any more than it is the opposite. It is for everybody. The Portmanteau has shown us that a very high form of art can be produced at a very low cost. And it has shown that whatever the cost the thing that is really worth while will more than pay for itself.

The future of the Portmanteau is another question. It may be that in the due course of time Mr. Walker will permit other theaters to be built from his plans, and we shall have the travelling theater as a fixture in our theatrical life. When this becomes possible it will engender a spread and growth of the new stage art which would otherwise have been impossible. One of the most vital things the Portmanteau Theater has given us so far, is probably the best repertory company in America. And this is after all what Mr. Walker is working for most. Books have been written without end on the necessity of the repertory theater. The experiment has been tried and tried again, and in most instances it has failed. But from the Theatre Libre to the Abbey Theater all these experiments have left their mark, have emphasized again the necessity for such a move, and have brought us one step nearer to the goal. And too, the traveling repertory theater has twice the chance of success that a stationary theater has. It is not necessary that the repertory imply the "little" theater, though that has its undeniable place. The ideal seating capacity of a theater is from 500 to 750, and the size of the ideal stage is that of the Princess Theater, New York. The proportions of the Punch and Judy Theater, New York, are excellent in every way, but this is exclusive of the stage itself. The auditorium should be deeper than it is wide, and no wider than the stage. The whole stage picture should always be in full view of every one, and every one should see it from approximately the same angle.

INTRODUCTION

Before leaving the Portmanteau Theater let me call attention to another point of importance. The full quota of sets for the theater along with the theater itself can be transported at the cost, or less than the cost, of transporting the scenery alone of an ordinary production. And, in addition, there is no house rent to pay, the biggest item of all, when the theater reaches its destination. True it must have its hall or auditorium of some kind, but that is not a drop in the bucket compared with what most managers have to pay for the use of a completely equipped theater. And the Portmanteau has its own lighting system and everything else it needs. If only because of this one factor of expense, the theater has more than justified its existence. With such an equipment the young man whose principal assets are taste and judgment can afford to embark on a managerial career unhampered by the thought that he will have to invest a fortune before he sees the first profits. If the Portmanteau eventually tends to take the theater out of the hands of those entirely unfitted to control it, and helps to restore the balance of power by bringing the younger and more idealistic element into the field, it will have performed an epoch-making task.

INTRODUCTION

By all this it will be seen that the Portmanteau Theater and its plays cannot be considered quite together. The theater itself means much artistically and commercially. It is in itself an emancipation proclamation, for it means freedom of movement, and vastly increased opportunities. It is the modern version of the strolling players. It has given us a lighting system unequaled in its simplicity and unrivaled in the ordinary theater. The settings for its plays have been masterpieces of stage art. The theater itself and the effects which it has engendered are thus of the utmost importance in the development and history of the stage.

INTRODUCTION

The plays contained in the repertory of the theater, of which there is a list in the Appendix, are of like importance in the scheme of things, perhaps not in themselves but in the trend which they indicate. We are unquestionably upon the eve of a great romantic renaissance. Woe to art if this be not so! The stage craft of Craig, of Reinhardt, and of Barker has marked the romantic renaissance of the theater; surely the drama cannot do otherwise than follow. Naturalism is to be considered as a necessary purgative rather than as a healthy, normal condition of the artistic structure. "The Gods of the Mountain" of Lord Dunsany, and "The Trimplet" of Stuart Walker are quite as "real" as "The Fugitive" of Galsworthy. Their terminology is different, that is all. That which is true of man in the mythical city of Kongros is likewise true of him in London. I do not mean to argue in favor of the abandonment of the play written in terms of every-day life, such as Galsworthy's, in favor of the purely imaginative, and poetic drama. Such an abandonment would be as futile as it would unwise. But I do mean to point out that the abnormal intellectualization of art is fully as destructive to the vital spiritual quality as the etherealization of art would be to the necessary intellectual quality. The Scriptures bid us to be as little children. We are as little children, and the virtue lies not in the fact itself, but in our realization and acknowledgment of it. It is only when we endeavor to assume the raiment of deities that we are overtaken by the seven green gods of Marma and punished for our temerity — or that Mr. Shaw, who also is a prophet in his own way, is able to point the finger of scorn at us, wise in our folly.

INTRODUCTION

In all that I have written here it will be very evident that I have dwelt on the excellencies of the Portmanteau Theater and its plays rather than on the weaknesses. Surely that is but natural. It must not be thought, however, that there are no weaknesses, that there is no room for improvement, or that the last word has been said on the subject. (Indeed it is one of the most vital factors, that only the first word has been said.) I have endeavored to sum up here what the Portmanteau has done as well as what it is, but by far the most important question is what it may do, and what it may become. It may be that the influence it will finally exert will be largely indirect, that the others who come after Mr. Walker will lay the surface on the road bed he has worked over. Only Time will show that, and Time is jealous of his secrets. But at least we have been shown something new, something worth while, and so it is well to pause and consider not only what it does mean, but also what it may mean in the final working out of the scheme of things. What will the travelling theater, the portable stage, mean to the repertory movement? Something beyond question. What does the drama of imagination as opposed to that of observation indicate, and where will it lead us? Surely it is worthy of consideration. Hence it must again be borne in mind that the importance of the Portmanteau, and it is important, is entirely relative, not absolute, that while it is deeply suggestive it is not in any sense conclusive, and that it is far less what the Portmanteau is now than what we shall make of it in the future that must concern us.

INTRODUCTION

And so when Memory draws slowly back the deep blue curtains of the Portmanteau Theater, and bids us come with her through the portals of "once upon a time, but not so very long ago," it is good to grasp our faith very firmly and to go with her, for there we may find not the surface things of every day life, but the deeper things. We may even find Truth. And we may even find that Truth is beautiful.

EDWARD HALE BIERSTADT.

THE PROLOGUE TO THE PORTMANTEAU THEATER

As the lights in the theater are lowered the voice of MEMORY is heard as she passes through the audience to the stage.

MEMORY

Once upon a time, but not so very long ago, you very grown-ups believed in all true things. You believed until you met the Fourteen Doubters who were so positive in their unbelief that you weakly cast aside the things that made you happy for the hapless things that they were calling life. You were afraid or ashamed to persist in your old thoughts, and strong in your folly you discouraged your little boy, and other people's little boys from the pastimes they had loved. Yet all through the early days you had been surely building magnificent cities, and all about you laying out magnificent gardens, and, with an April pool you had made infinite seas where pirates fought or mermaids played in coral caves. Then came the Doubters laughing and jeering at you, and you let your cities, and gardens, and seas go floating in the air — unseen, unsung — wonderful cities, and gardens, and seas, peopled with the realest of people. . . . So now you, and he, and I are met at the portals. Pass through them with me. I have something there that you think is lost. The key is the tiny regret for the real things, the little regret that sometimes seems to weight your spirit at twilight, and compress all life into a moment's longing. Come, pass through. You cannot lose your way. Here are your cities, your gardens, and your April pools. Come through the portals of once upon a time, but not so very long ago — today — now!

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

She passes through the soft blue curtains, but unless you are willing to follow her, turn back now. There are only play-things here.

THE TRIMPLET

THE LADY BOBOLARA
THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO
THE LADY CARATINA
THE BARON MILTON-MAURICE
THE PERSON PASSING BY
YOU (in the audience)

The Scene is a lonely place.
The Time is partly then and partly nowadays.

[When Memory has disappeared and the blue curtains are quite still and every one who is old and irrevocably very grown-up has left the theatre, the Prologue of the Plays and the Device-Bearer appear at either side of the fore-stage. Then the Prologue speaks.]

PROLOGUE

She was Memory . . . I am the Prologue . . .
He is the Device-Bearer . . . I am here to elucidate —

YOU

What is elucidate?

PROLOGUE

Elucidate means to make clear, to explain anything you do not understand. . . . As I said, I am here to elucidate everything you are not sure about. I shall answer questions sometimes, but not always. . . . Our first play is a dream play and you know what you ought to think of a dream. At first it all seems very strange, and so many things happen that you think you can not possibly remember all the events. Then suddenly something snaps — and everything becomes as clear as the day which is coming over the sea with your bath and your breakfast. Now, you won't spoil a dream by asking questions, will you?

[He claps his hands twice for silence and with a very polite bow he and the Device-Bearer withdraw.]

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

*When the curtains open the stage is empty.
The lights which seemed indistinct and blurred at first, gradually increase until trees form against a luminous and misty, moonlit sky.
Presently a voice is heard calling far away — the voice of The Person Passing By.*

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

[Enter the Lady Caratina.

She is young and eager with a note of tragic fear in her voice.

CARATINA

To-day I am one and twenty. To-day I come to this lonely place to learn my future. I must know how to live happily ever after. My mother says if I call aloud a voice will answer and tell me how I may live happily ever after.
Halloo! Hoola!

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

CARATINA

A voice! A voice! The voice of The Person Passing By.

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

CARATINA

The voice of The Person Passing By! . . .
Speak to me.

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

CARATINA

My mother, the Lady Bobolara, bade me come to you.

THE TRIMPLET

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola! (The voice seems to come from one afloat in the air)

CARATINA

Can you hear me?

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

CARATINA

Then these magic words I say:

Mullion! Mizzen!

The moon has risen

And only one star is near;

The mist has spread

From its valley bed,

Oh, Passer, do you hear?

VOICE

Plucky! Plenty!

You're one and twenty —

Is there something you would know?

This is your choice,

To hear my voice,

Speak truth or naught, or go.

CARATINA

Belith! Belath!

I've followed the path

That leads to this lonely place.

For hours — full nine —

I've climbed to the shrine

Where I hope to see your face.

VOICE

You can not see

The face of me

Until the wild bird sings.

Five tests I make

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

For pity's sake.

For dreams and finger rings.

CARATINA

Mullion! Mizzen!

The moon has risen

And only one star is near —

The mist has spread

From its valley bed,

Oh, Passer, I am here.

VOICE

Can you feel?

CARATINA

I can feel.

VOICE

What do you feel?

CARATINA

I feel the chill of the air and the damp of the mist, and the magic of the moon — and a great, great love for Milton-Maurice.

VOICE

You can feel. . . . Can you taste?

CARATINA

I can taste.

VOICE

What can you taste?

CARATINA

I passed a lovely tree upon the way, and I tasted of the fruit that was delicate like the honey from a forget-me-not.

VOICE

You can taste. . . . Can you hear?

CARATINA

I can hear the tall trees whisper to the little winds.

THE TRIMPLET

VOICE

You can hear. . . . Can you see?

CARATINA

I can see yon tall, tall tree touch on the nearest star.

VOICE

You can see. . . . Can you smell?

CARATINA

I can smell the hideous mould of the dead leaves that hide amongst the trees.

VOICE

You can not smell.

CARATINA

I can smell the death-like smell of mould.

VOICE

There is a surpassing fragrance of a thousand trees that fills the air.

CARATINA

I can not smell. . . . Alas, I need your help.

VOICE

I can not help until you see my face.

CARATINA

I can not see your face until the wild bird sings.

VOICE

I have nothing more to say. Halloo! Hoola!
(The voice is lost in the distance)

CARATINA

Alas, my mother comes and I have naught to tell. My future lies in mystery. I am one and twenty, and still I do not know how to live happily ever after. (She sits and weeps)

[Enter the Lady Bobolara.

She is an alert, hard woman with an undertone of resignation. She has come to the lonely place because she has always come, but she feels that her pilgrimage is futile.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOBOLARA

Halloo! Hoola!

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

BOBOLARA

Mullion! Mizzen!
The moon has risen
And never a star is near;
The mist has spread,
From its valley bed,
Oh, Passer, do you hear?

VOICE

Plucky! Plenty!
You're three times twenty,
The days will come from a far
Until you see
Yon tall, tall tree
Touch on the nearest star.

BOBOLARA

I can not see
Yon tall, tall tree
Touch on the nearest star.

VOICE

One test I'll make
For pity's sake
For dreams and a silver bar.

BOBOLARA

Mullion! Mizzen!
The moon has risen
And never a star is near;
The mist has spread

“THE TRIMPLET”

Caratina and her mother, Bobolara

THE TRIMPLET

From its valley bed —
Oh, Passer, I am here.

VOICE

Can you see?

BOBOLARA

I can feel, and taste, and smell, and hear, but I can not see yon tall, tall tree touch on the nearest star.

CARATINA

Mother, I can see yon tall, tall tree touch on the nearest star.

BOBOLARA

It does not touch. I see trees and hills and sky — trees like jagged teeth bite into the sky.
(She has seen this so often she does not look)

VOICE

See, your daughter weeps.

BOBOLARA

Her eyes are in the shadow. I can not see them.

VOICE

So parts of the whole, wide world are always in shadow.

CARATINA

Mother, I am going to search for the wild bird and beg him to sing.

BOBOLARA

Since I was one and twenty I have waited for the tall, tall tree to touch on the nearest star.

CARATINA

The tall tree is touching on the star now,
Mother dear.

BOBOLARA

Silly girl! The tree and star are miles apart.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

CARATINA

Come here and you will see.

BOBOLARA

Why should I go there? They do not touch,
I say.

CARATINA

But I see them touch.

BOBOLARA

Impudent girl!

CARATINA

I know what I see.

BOBOLARA

The still, tall trees do nothing but waft their fragrance in the air.

CARATINA

I do not smell a fragrance. The air is filled with the smell of mould that the sun has never warmed.

BOBOLARA

I say there is a fragrance from the trees.

CARATINA

I shall not say there is no fragrance, Mother dear, but until I come face to face with The Person Passing By I can not learn to smell the fragrance. I shall find the wild bird, and beg him to sing.

BOBOLARA

The wild bird will never sing.

CARATINA

I shall find the wild bird, Mother, and when he sees my tears he will sing. (Caratina goes out)

BOBOLARA

He will never sing.

THE TRIMPLET

VOICE

You do not know, old woman. Let her go.

BOBOLARA (fiercely; facing the unseen)

Why have you kept me waiting all these years?

VOICE

I have not kept you waiting. You have kept yourself waiting. You will not see, and you have grown bitter.

BOBOLARA

Is there naught else for me to do but wait?

VOICE

To-day your daughter is one and twenty. To-day Milton-Maurice is one and twenty. He comes to me to learn his fate. What shall I say?

BOBOLARA

He can not wed my daughter.

VOICE

Why?

BOBOLARA

His father and I have not spoken for nine and thirty years.

VOICE

Why?

BOBOLARA

His father injured my father.

VOICE

Did he injure you?

BOBOLARA

No, but I hate him because he is his father's son.

VOICE

Hatred will not heal the hurt.

BOBOLARA

Oh, if I could see you face to face!

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

VOICE

Your eyes are blind,
Your heart is blind,
Your life has been a life of ruth;
Your eyes can't see
The truths that be Until your heart sees truth.

BOBOLARA

Oh, if I could only see you face to face!

VOICE

You can not see my face until you smell the fragrance of the old, old flower.

BOBOLARA

You can not help until I see your face and I can not see your face until I smell the fragrance of the old, old flower.

VOICE

I have nothing more to say. Halloo! Hoola!

BOBOLARA (mechanically)

I know the old, old flower will never bloom; yet
I shall continue to search and to wait. (Bobolara goes out)

VOICE

High on the hills
By lakes and rills
She'll fly on shadowed wings:
She'll find the flower
Within the hour —
Before the wild bird sings.
[Enter the Baron Milton-Maurice.
He is young, confident and confiding.

MILTON-MAURICE

To-day I am one and twenty. To-day I come to this lonely place to hear the story of my future. Halloo! Hoola!

THE TRIMPLET

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

MILTON-MAURICE

Are you The Person Passing By?

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

MILTON-MAURICE

Mullion! Mizzen!

The moon is risen

And only one star is near:

The mist has spread

From its valley bed —

Oh, Passer, do you hear?

VOICE

Plucky! Plenty!

You're one and twenty,

Is there something you would know?

This is your choice

To hear my voice

Speak truth or naught — or go.

MILTON-MAURICE

Belith! Belath!

I've followed the path

That leads to this lonely place.

For hours — full nine —

I've climbed to the shrine

Where I hope to see your face.

VOICE

You can not see

The face of me

Until a torch burns blue:

One test I make

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

For pity's sake,
For love, for hope, for you.

MILTON-MAURICE

Mullion! Mizzen!
The moon is risen
And only one star is near:
The mist has spread
From its valley bed —
Oh, Passer, I am here.

VOICE

Can you taste?

MILTON-MAURICE

I can taste.

VOICE

What can you taste?

MILTON-MAURICE

On the way I passed a tree where a wondrous fruit hung low. I ate of it and it had a flavor like chaff.

VOICE

You can not taste.

MILTON-MAURICE

The taste was like chaff, I say.

VOICE

There was a delicious flavor like the honey from a forget-me-not.

MILTON-MAURICE

Alas! I can not taste . . . I need your help.

VOICE

I can not help until you see my face.

MILTON-MAURICE

I can not see your face until a torch burns blue.

VOICE

I have nothing more to say. Halloo! Hoola!

THE TRIMPLET

MILTON-AURICE

Oh, Caratina, Caratina, how can we wed? Until I taste we can not live happily ever afterward. I can not learn to taste until I see his face. I can not see his face until a torch burns blue.

[Enter the Marquess of Strenathco.

He is a little man with infinite vanity, and the assurance that comes with great wealth.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

What is this foolishness?

MILTON-AURICE

I have come to this lonely place, my Father, to learn how to be happy ever after.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Silly boy, come home and play a game of ninepins with me.

MILTON-AURICE

No, Father, no. I must first find the torch that's burning blue.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Stuff and nonsense!

MILTON-AURICE

And then I shall find the Lady Bobolara and ask her for the hand of the lovely Caratina.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

What! Marry the grand-daughter of my father's enemy?

MILTON-AURICE

She is not my enemy. Why should I dislike her because my grandfather disliked her grandfather?

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Milton-Maurice, my son, have you no family pride? Give up this mad whim and come home. You can not wed the Lady Caratina.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

MILTON-MAURICE

My Father, I am going to live happily ever after!

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

See how happy I am! I am the richest man in all the world.

MILTON-MAURICE

But you are not happy.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Why?

MILTON-MAURICE

You are not happy because the Lady Bobolara is richer than you are.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

For that I can not forgive her! What right has she to be richer than I am?

VOICE

Mildew! Moldew!

Let nothing hold you

From your way, oh, Milton-Maurice

Within the hour

An old, old flower

Will help bring lasting peace.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I think I hear a voice. Who speaks?

MILTON-MAURICE

It is The Person Passing By.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Where is he?

MILTON-MAURICE

No one knows; we seek, and seek to see his face.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

What nonsense is this?

THE TRIMPLET

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO (as one who hears through a mist)

Who speaks?

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

If you are here show me your face.

VOICE

Belith! Belath!

Old man of wrath

You'll never see my face

Until you hear

A bird song clear

In this moonlit, lonely place.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

What trick is this?

MILTON-MAURICE

Oh, perfect bliss

That my father must learn to hear.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

My ears are good

For any mood

Except a song of cheer.

VOICE

Bingle! Bungle!

Life's a jungle

For a stern, old man like you.

There's just one thing:

Hear the wild bird sing

And learn to dance in the dew.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Dance in the dew!

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

MILTON-MAURICE

A man like you!

VOICE

While the wild bird sings the tune.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

With bitter word

I'll stone the bird

By the light of the silver moon.

VOICE

Ah, you can be

Like him and me

If you but use your eyes to see.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

My pride is based

On a perfect taste,

And none can smell like me.

MILTON-MAURICE

But he can't hear

The bird song clear

That floats from this lonely place

Like melodious light

On a moonlit night —

VOICE

Then he can not see my face.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Now why should I

Wish to descry

The features of fairy folk?

You can't engage

To lessen my age;

My wrinkles you can't revoke.

VOICE

Forget your fears,

Forget the years,

THE TRIMPLET

Forget all else but this;
You'll have to hear
The bird-song clear
Or give up all hope of bliss.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I've tried to hear
The bird-song clear,
But the song is harsh, I say —
I hate the notes
From feathered throats,
I hate the trill and roundelay.

VOICE

You'll have to thrill
To the bird-voice trill —
You must learn to love the song;
Else with open eyes
You'll search the skies
But find that all life is wrong.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I can't, I say.

VOICE

Then have your way!
I spake and you will not heed.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

The sound I hate.

VOICE

Accept your fate . . .

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO (after a terrible struggle with his vanity and his assurance)

O, Passer, your help I need.

MILTON-MAURICE

Father! You ask for help!

VOICE

Kelee! Keloy!

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

He asks for joy
He's throttled his silly pride!
When he tastes the fruit
With the succulent root
I'll reveal myself at his side.

MILTON-MAURICE

Bezit! Bezoot!
Please seek the fruit
And learn the charm of laughter —

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO (eagerly)

We'll heed the voice
And make the choice —

MILTON-MAURICE

To live happily ever after.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Where is the fruit
With the succulent root?

MILTON-MAURICE

I passed it on the way here.
The land I'll search Till I find the torch —

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Oh, Passer, will you stay here?

MILTON-MAURICE

I'll return to you
With the will to do
And I'll bring the flame that's burning blue.

VOICE

Me-la! Me-lo!

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Let's go!

MILTON-MAURICE

Let's go!

THE TRIMPLET

VOICE

And the search you'll never rue.

[The Marquess of Strenathco and Milton-Maurice rush out.]

VOICE

O'er hill and hollow

Good luck will follow

And everything's coming out right;

When they return

They'll be ready to learn

A way to see the light.

[Enter Caratina.]

She carries a wondrous fruit in her hands.

CARATINA (calling)

Mother, Mother, I've searched high and low for the bird, but I found only this lovely fruit.
Mother!

[Enter Bobolara.]

Caratina hides the fruit behind her.

Bobolara carries a torch with a blue flame.

BOBOLARA

Woe is me! I have hunted everywhere for the old, old flower, and I found only this torch that burns blue.

[Enter Milton-Maurice.]

Bobolara hides the torch behind her back.

Milton-Maurice carries a large flower that is closed.

MILTON-MAURICE

I found no torch, but in my path there bloomed a flower. Ah, Caratina — (He hides the flower behind him)

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOBOLARA

You can not wed my daughter!

[All three, and later the Marquess of Strenathco, seem to be in a haze. Everyone is of, and for himself alone.]

Enter the Marquess of Strenathco.

He carries a marvelous bird on his hand.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I could not find the fruit but I have found a bird: he is mute.

BOBOLARA (to Milton-Maurice)

You can not wed my daughter!

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO (hiding the bird behind him)

What?

BOBOLARA

Caratina, tell Milton-Maurice that I did not address his father.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

My son can not wed your daughter? Indeed he can not wed your daughter!

VOICE

Hush! End this strife

As you love life

And try to live in peace:

Just look about

And you'll find out

That wonders never cease!

CARATINA

What does he mean?

BOBOLARA

There is no meaning. For nine and thirty years he has promised something, but I can not see any hope.

THE TRIMPLET

VOICE

Look down! look up!
The bitter cup
Is almost drained to the leas;
Let each one try
To face the sky
And see what each one sees. (With strange obedience all four face the sky)

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Yon tall, tall tree touches the nearest star!

BOBOLARA

Absurd!

VOICE

Oh, clouds and rifts —
You all bear gifts
That you hide behind your backs;
Put out your hands
To my commands
Or shiver and shake in your tracks.
[They put out their hands, each one disclosing what another has sought.]

BOBOLARA

I smell the breath of an old, old flower — Oh,
Passer, are you here?

MILTON-MAURICE

I see the blue of a burning torch — Oh, Passer, are you here?

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I taste the fruit with the succulent root — Oh, Passer, are you here?

CARATINA

I hear the song the wild bird sings — Oh,
Passer, are you here?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

[The light begins to fade from the world and strange music fills the air.]

VOICE

From North and South
From source and mouth
I come through the worlds to you —
From East and West,
From vale and crest,
I'm bringing a message true.
River and brook Learn to look
At persons passing by — Oh, use your ears
And use your tears
For a person passing by.

[There is a long, still blackness and when the light again appears The Person Passing By is seen beside the four.]

BOBOLARA (fearfully)

Caratina, is he there? I dare not look.

CARATINA (in wonder. To her he seems calm and tender and strong)

He is there!

[They all look.]

BOBOLARA

Why, he is like any other man.

THE PERSON PASSING BY

You see that, and yet you can not see yon tall, tall tree touch on the nearest star!

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

This man has played a trick on us. (To the Marquess of Strenathco, too, he is like any other man)

THE TRIMPLET

THE PERSON PASSING BY

When I could not be seen you listened to me and feared me. Now that I am here you doubt me.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I doubt you, but I shall be fair to you. I shall test you.

[A faint, golden light illumines the face of The Person Passing By.]

MILTON-MAURICE

Father! Father!

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I shall test him! (Age has seen wonder so long that even wonder is a commonplace)

CARATINA

What shall we do to live happily ever after?

[The Person Passing By smiles gently at Cara-tina. The smile seems to awaken a strange tenderness in Bobolara.]

BOBOLARA

I have so little time to live. Tell me how to be happy.

[The Person Passing By smiles gently at her and at Milton-Maurice and pityingly at the Marquess of Strenathco.]

THE PERSON PASSING BY

You do not understand.

(To Caratina)

You can not smell a pleasant fragrance;

(To Milton-Maurice)

You can not taste a delicate flavor;

(To Bobolara)

You can not see a glorious sight;

(To the Marquess of Strenathco)

You can not hear a lovely sound.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

There is a shadow over your eyes.
And over your tongue,
And over your nose,
And over your ears.
Your defects are all different; and yet to live happily ever after, you and all the world need the same thing.

ALL

And what do we need?

THE PERSON PASSING BY

You need a trimplet.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO (remembering his importance)

Oh, yes, I never thought of that.

THE PERSON PASSING BY

You know what a trimplet is then?

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Do you?

THE PERSON PASSING BY

Do you know what a trimplet is?

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I know if you know.

THE PERSON PASSING BY

Perhaps you do — then you'll tell the rest; I'll stand your test. Remember in a trimplet lies all happiness.

CARATINA

Are there enough trimplets for all of us?

THE PERSON PASSING BY

One trimplet is enough for all of you.

CARATINA

Where is the trimplet?

THE PERSON PASSING BY

It might be here, or there, or anywhere; but sometimes you have to have patience and wait.

THE TRIMPLET

BOBOLARA

Patience and wait! I have waited nine and thirty years!

[The golden light on the face of The Person Passing By has become stronger until it has become an overpowering radiance.]

THE PERSON PASSING BY

You have been stubborn and impatient.

BOBOLARA

Stubborn and impatient! My life is almost at an end. I must hurry.

THE PERSON PASSING BY

Why hurry? — Heaven is full of days and they are all coming this way.

BOBOLARA

They are nearly all gone for me.

THE PERSON PASSING BY

There will always be more and more and more to come.

[The Person Passing By moves, as if to go.]

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

The trimplet! I can't remember its color.

THE PERSON PASSING BY

Well, I'll tell you this: — a trimplet can rest in your hand but you can not hold it. It can lie upon your fingers but it can not hold them. Good-bye. I'm passing on. Halloo! Hoola!
[The Person Passing By has disappeared in the gathered gloom. . . . It brightens.]

BOBOLARA

What is a trimplet?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

She speaks to me for the first time in nine and thirty years.

[A man of affairs does not always speak to the point.]

BOBOLARA

What is a trimplet?

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Why it's a —

BOBOLARA

What is it? Speak!

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I can not remember its color.

BOBOLARA

What is it?

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Woman, I do not know!

ALL

What! You do not know?

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I couldn't tell him I didn't know. He would think me a fool.

CARATINA

Oh, and I can not live happily ever after.

BOBOLARA

Madman!

MILTON-MAURICE

Have patience, I shall ask. Halloo! Hoola!

VOICE

I have nothing more to say. Halloo! Hoola!

MILTON-MAURICE

I want to ask just one question.

BOBOLARA

One question only.

THE TRIMPLET

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

CARATINA

Please! Please! To-day I am one and twenty!

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

[The Marquess of Strenathco has been searching for something.]

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Come back! Come back!

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola! (He laughs a laugh that seems to roll through the skies)

BOBOLARA

Now you've done it! You — with your pride and your deafness!

MILTON-MAURICE

Well, there's only one thing to do: hunt for the trimplet.

CARATINA

I know it isn't this torch.

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

MILTON-MAURICE

It isn't this wild bird song.

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I wish I knew its color.

BOBOLARA

Stupid! That wouldn't help. Everything here is gloom.

[The ray of golden light appears again.]

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

CARATINA

What is that golden light?

MILTON-MAURICE

Perhaps a sunbeam has slipped through the moon.

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

BOBOLARA

I have hunted everywhere.

MILTON-MAURICE

Let's sit down and think.

[They all sit down and think. They are a ludicrous lot.]

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

We might as well give up.

BOBOLARA

No, I have been face to face with The Person Passing By. I shall stay here to the end.

YOU (in the audience)

Why don't you look out here?

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Who are you, sir?

YOU

I live in nowadays; but I think I can help you find the trimplet.

BOBOLARA

Impertinent!

CARATINA

He might as well try, Mother dear.

MILTON-MAURICE

He can't do worse than fail.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

All right, we're coming.

THE TRIMPLET

YOU

It can't be this handkerchief — no, for I can hold that.

CARATINA (now in the audience)

It's not this flower.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO (now in the audience)

Perhaps it's the light of this little girl's eyes.

BOBOLARA

Look under the chair.

MILTON-MAURICE (far out in the audience)

It's not up here.

BOBOLARA (to You)

See, you silly person, you have dragged us into nowadays to no purpose.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I'm going back.

YOU

I'll go with you.

ALL

What?

YOU

Perhaps I can find it up there.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

You could find where we had failed. Ha!
Ha!

YOU

I'm going anyway.

[You starts for the stage, but Milton-Maurice intercepts him.]

MILTON-MAURICE

Well, promise if you come into the play you won't wed the lovely Caratina.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

YOU

I don't want to wed any one yet. I want to find the trimplet.

[You runs on to the stage followed by the others. The ray of golden light falls upon his hand. He tests it. It rests in his hand but he can not hold it. It lies upon his fingers but it can not hold them.]

YOU (triumphantly)

The trimplet! I know what a trimplet is!

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

What is it?

YOU

A trimplet is the hole a sunbeam makes in a shadow.

VOICE

Halloo! Hoola!

A light — a light

Shines in the night

And fills their souls with splendor!

STRENATHCO

How can a trimplet cure my deafness?

VOICE

Move to the right,

Stand in the light,

And fill your souls with splendor.

[Caratina walks with mingled hope and fear to the right of the golden ray and then steps into the light. Bobolara follows, then Milton-Maurice, then Strenathco. Each is affected to the depths of his soul as The Person Passing By speaks the word that restores his lost sense.]

VOICE

Smell . . . See . . . Taste . . . Hear . . .

THE TRIMPLET

*[As he commands the inanimate things obey.
The trees sigh, the torch glows, the flower opens and the bird sings.*

Blow . . . Glow . . . Burst . . . Sing . . .

[Then with the triumph of all the world —

Love is far — love is near —

Love is everything.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I hear the wild bird's song.

CARATINA

I smell the fragrance of a thousand trees.

MILTON-MAURICE

I taste the flavor of the honey of forget-me-nots.

BOBOLARA

I see yon tall, tall tree touch on the nearest star! (then to the Marquess of Strenathco)
Neighbor, Heaven has sent a new day.

[There is a pause.

Then You, who has stepped aside and watched the play with breathless interest, now takes a hand.

YOU (to Caratina and Milton-Maurice)

Now, you two must wed and live happily ever after . . . If you don't I won't like the play very much. I'm not sure that I like it anyway, because heaven knows how long it would have kept up if I hadn't helped you find the trimplet.

VOICE

The play's near done
And every one
Has learned a simple lesson.

YOU

I don't think it fair to try to teach us a lesson

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

every time you tell us a story. I like a play that is a play. If this had been a good play — I couldn't have got into it.

(To the audience) Could I?

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Well, we did our very best and I think it's a pretty good play, and so does the author. Now you go on out there. The play isn't ended yet.

YOU

It must have a pretty ending, mind you.

[You returns to his seat.]

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Caratina, here is the hand of my son, the Baron Milton-Maurice.

[He turns to You for approval.]

YOU (approving but adding a final touch)

You must give him a dowry.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

I give him all my land that lies between the ends of the rainbow.

[A rainbow forms in the sky.]

VOICE

In the valley, you

Will dance in the dew

While the wild bird sings the tune.

For what is so rare

As a rainbow there

Afloat in the light of the moon?

To help the tale

He gives a vale

That to the rainbow bends,

And we are told

That pots of gold

THE TRIMPLET

Lie at the rainbow ends.

YOU (after waiting a moment for the complete conclusion of the story)

You ought to say something, Babalora.

THE MARQUESS OF STRENATHCO

Her name is not Babalora — it's Bobolara.

BOBOLARA

Well, we've certainly worked hard enough for you to know our names at least.

CARATINA

But he's quite right, Mother; you ought to say something.

YOU

Yes, you ought to say something — whether we know your name or not.

BOBOLARA

Quite right, I ought. I shall give to Caratina the castle of jade in the garden where the gold flowers blow. (To Caratina) And you shall live there happily ever after.

YOU (satisfied)

For Heaven is full of days and they're all coming this way!

VOICE

Warm sun, blue sky,
If you only try
You'll be a person passing by,
Who knows the why
Of the sibilant sigh —
Oh, for a person passing by!
Halloo! Hoola!
Halloo! Hoola!

(The Curtains Close)

NEVERTHELESS

A GIRL A BOY
A BURGLAR

The Scene is a room just upstairs.
The Time is last night — or to-night, perhaps.

PROLOGUE

Our next play is an interlude before the curtains. You may sleep during an interlude, but you mustn't snore or have the nightmare because that would be very discourteous to the author and very discouraging to us. We can not live if you do not like us, and you can not like us if you do not keep awake.

[After the Prologue has bowed the Device-Bearer brings two chairs, a stool, a table, a lamp and places them on the forestage. If you are not a very grown-up you know immediately that you are in a room that belongs to very young people.]

[The Boy enters carrying a book. He is angry. He looks around to see if any one is looking and then goes to the table and tries to remove some money from a small bank that has two locks; but he can't find the keys.]

[As he is shaking it violently in an attempt to force it, the Girl enters.]

GIRL
Billie!

BOY
I will force it!

GIRL
You made a compact with me.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY

Don't use words like that — I hate words.
(He continues to try to force the bank)

GIRL

It's a miserable shame, Billie Cleves!

BOY

Now, Lou, don't use any more words on me.
I won't stand it.

GIRL

Well, what shall I say?

BOY

Say dirty shame.

GIRL

Billie!

BOY

I don't care. I'm tired of being corrected all the time. When I'm old enough to paddle my own canoe, I'm going to murder grammar all the time. I'm going to use short words and I hope I'll say I seen and I would have went.

GIRL

Billie Cleves!

BOY

And, if I can get this bank open, I'll go away forever to-night and I'll talk just as I please.

GIRL

My, Billie! You are angry!

BOY

Angry! I'm mad! I'm awful mad! (He shakes the bank terrifically)

GIRL

You'll break it.

BOY

I don't care. I'm going to bust it —

NEVERTHELESS

GIRL

Billie, Mother wouldn't like that word at all.

BOY

I don't care. I'm going to bu — break it open and then I'm going to leave home forever.

(He puts it on the floor and starts to trample it)

GIRL

Billie Cleves, don't you dare! That's half mine. And you can't open it unless we both agree.

BOY

Who said so?

GIRL

Why, it was our compact.

BOY

If you were fourteen years old, Louise Cleves, and your mother punished you for speaking bad English you'd forget all about compacts.

GIRL

No, I wouldn't.

BOY

Yes, you would.

GIRL

No, I wouldn't.

BOY

You don't know what you'd do; you're not fourteen and you're not a boy.

GIRL

I wouldn't break a compact if I were a hundred and fourteen.

BOY

Now, Lou, listen.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

GIRL

I don't want to listen.

BOY

Just put yourself in my place.

GIRL

Billie Cleves, we agreed never, never to open that bank until we were in need of food and clothing.

BOY

Well, I'm in need, Lou.

GIRL

No, you're not; Father and Mother give you all the food and clothes you want.

BOY

But I'm going to run away forever and go to Honolulu or Texas.

GIRL

No, you're not.

BOY

I am.

GIRL

Well, Billie, you deserved to be corrected.

BOY

All I said was, "Jim's a rotten rider." And he is.

GIRL

Well, that wasn't nice.

BOY (exasperated at not being able to open the bank)

Lou, where is my key?

GIRL

I put it away.

BOY

Where?

NEVERTHELESS

GIRL

Our compact was for me to take the key to your blue lock and hide it, and you were to take the key to my pink lock and hide it so we couldn't fall into temptation.

BOY

I'll pick the locks like a burglar.

GIRL

You can't. They're both pick-proof. And there's only one key in all the whole wide world for each lock.

BOY

I'll get your key and open your lock.

GIRL

My key won't open your lock.

BOY

I can't find yours where I hid it.

GIRL

I found it and hid it again.

BOY

Where is it?

GIRL

I don't think I ought to tell you, Billie, I'm afraid you'll fall into temptation.

BOY

How about you?

GIRL

Boys are more easily tempted than women.

BOY

H-m!

GIRL

Because they get out more.

BOY

I'll throw it and break it.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

GIRL

Now, Billie, don't be rash.

BOY

I don't care.

GIRL

Father'll hear you.

BOY

Father won't hear me much longer about this house.

GIRL

Please, Billie, read your book.

BOY

I won't do it, I won't. I'm sick of goody-goody books.

GIRL

What did mother give you to read?

BOY (sullenly)

There it is.

GIRL

"The Narrow Path!" Why, she sent me up here to read that, too.

BOY

What for?

GIRL

I said "he don't" instead of "he doesn't."

BOY

Just after I said it?

GIRL

Yes.

BOY

You are a goose.

GIRL

But I don't get angry like you do.

NEVERTHELESS

BOY

You're not as old as I am. Other boys of my age do pretty much as they please.

GIRL

Well, here we are. There's no use quarrelling, because it's mother's plan to make us read a fine book whenever we make mistakes in grammar. And you know mother's plans! (She opens the book) Oh, dear, no pictures! . . . Let's hurry up.

BOY

I won't do it.

GIRL

Come on, Billie, and get it over with.

BOY

Give me the keys or I'll break — I'll bust it.

GIRL

I won't give you the keys and you won't break it — William Cleves, if you don't live up to our compact, I'll not have anything more to do with you.

BOY

I don't care. (He throws the bank violently)

GIRL

Billie! (She pounces upon the bank and bursts into tears)

GIRL

I never thought you'd do it.

[The Boy moves about uneasily.

I never thought you'd do it. (She weeps torrentially)

BOY

Now, Lou —

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

GIRL

You broke our compact and tried to destroy our bank.

BOY (defiantly)

I tried to bust it — and I hope I did.

GIRL

Billie Cleves! — Well, you didn't even nick it. (She takes up the book after carefully placing the bank so that the Boy can't get it)

BOY

Lou, won't you lend me the keys a moment?

GIRL (relentlessly)

You broke a compact.

BOY

Please, Lou.

GIRL

I have my reading to do.

BOY

I'm going to go away — forever — Lou!

GIRL

Good-bye.

BOY (fiercely)

I want my money!

GIRL

It's our money. And I'm the guardian.

BOY

All right. . . . Good-bye.

GIRL

Good-bye. (Reading) "The Narrow Path is very steep and straight. It leads to a land of gold and it is not easy to negotiate because Heaven thinks it is best for people to climb for what they want. Nevertheless —"

NEVERTHELESS

BOY

Are you going to give me the money to run away with?

GIRL

No.

BOY

Good-bye.

GIRL

A compact is binding to both parties, father says.

BOY

Good-bye.

GIRL

Good-bye. (Reading) Nevertheless — nevertheless — (She begins to giggle deliciously)

BOY

What's funny, Lou?

GIRL

Come here and look, Billie.

[The Boy drags himself to the book.]

BOY

What?

GIRL

This word.

BOY

Never — the — less. It's just like any other word.

GIRL

No, it isn't. Steep and straight and the all look like something. But this is just funny.

BOY

Nevertheless.

[The Girl goes off into gales of laughter.]

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY. (Reading further and turning the page)
Here it is again. (He laughs)

GIRL
Where?

BOY
Here. (Turning back)

GIRL
Neverthe — (turning the page and going into another paroxysm of laughter as she finds the rest of the word on the next page) — less.

BOY
It is funny-looking!

GIRL
What does it mean?

BOY
I'll look in the dictionary.

GIRL
I know what it means in a way, but I can't explain it —

BOY
So do I. (He goes to the dictionary)

GIRL
Never — the — less. (She looks up and sees that the Boy is busy. She looks around cautiously, then takes up the book and hides it. As she hears the Boy coming back, she resumes her seat and the book)

BOY
It means notwithstanding, yet, however. . . .

GIRL
Dictionaries never tell you the real, honest, true, live meaning, do they, Billie?

BOY (fascinated)
Never — the — less.

“NEVERTHELESS”

The Girl and Boy encounter a strange word

NEVERTHELESS

GIRL

It's three words all huddled together. (She pictures it on her fingers)

BOY (counting the words on his fingers)

Never — the — less.

GIRL

How did they come together?

BOY (losing himself in the puzzle)

I don't know.

GIRL

Let's ask mother.

BOY (remembering his anger)

No, I won't.

GIRL

I will!

BOY

Let's be independent, Lou. I don't like to ask favors when I'm punished.

GIRL

Well, I'm being punished, too; but I want to know all about this funny word.

BOY

Let's try some other way.

GIRL

I know!

BOY

What?

GIRL

They say if you put out the lights and shut your eyes very tight and wait very patiently that an elf will come and tell you anything you want to know.

BOY

I don't believe in elves.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

GIRL

Billie!

BOY

I don't.

GIRL

The plural of elf is elves. We had it to-day.

BOY (exasperated)

I knew it,—but I get tired of having to think about everything before I speak. Sometimes I try not to think at all.

GIRL (going to the lamp)

I'm going to turn out the light.

BOY (scornfully)

Nothing will happen.

GIRL

Well, we can try.

BOY (hunting)

Lou, where's the bank?

GIRL

I hid it, Billie.

BOY

You shan't hide my money!

GIRL

Keep quiet, Billie, and sit down. (She puts the light out)

BOY (sheepishly)

I feel so silly.

GIRL

Are your eyes shut?

BOY

No.

GIRL

Billy, please shut your eyes.

NEVERTHELESS

BOY

I won't do it . . . I'm going to turn on the light.

GIRL

Now, Billie . . .

[He evidently starts for the lamp.

I'll give you the keys if you're good.

BOY

Now?

GIRL

No, afterward.

BOY (turning on the lamp)

Promise.

GIRL

Yes. (Out goes the light as she pulls it) Are you sitting down?

BOY

Uh-huh!

GIRL

Are your eyes shut?

BOY

Uh-huh!

GIRL

Tight?

BOY

Uh-huh!

GIRL

And when he comes don't talk.

BOY

Uh —.

GIRL

'Cause you don't believe and you might frighten him away.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY

Uh —.

GIRL

Where are you, Billie?

BOY

Here I am.

GIRL

Move over.

BOY

There isn't much room.

GIRL

Now. (Silence) Do you hear anything?

BOY

No.

[Silence.

A pale light appears between the curtains, then a dark form.

The light is shut off and presently reappears at the table.

The Burglar opens the drawers and, taking out some pretty things, puts them in his pocket.

The light goes out.

Silence.

GIRL

Billie, I just can't stand it a moment longer.

Don't you hear the elf? . . . (A sound)

There he is!

[The light comes on again and the Burglar takes up the bank. Just as he is putting it in his pocket, the Girl speaks.

GIRL

Do you know what nevertheless means?

[The bank goes clattering to the floor.

The light is turned upon the two children. The

NEVERTHELESS

Burglar takes a step forward and stumbles over the bank.

BURGLAR

Don't holler.

[The Boy turns the light on.]

BOY

A burglar!

GIRL

If you don't move, Billie, a burglar won't hurt you.

BOY

Hold up your hands, Lou.

BOY and GIRL (holding their hands up)

We give up.

BURGLAR

Put out the light.

GIRL

Please don't put out the light . . . We'll be good.

[A door is heard to close in the next room.]

BURGLAR

Put out the light. (The light goes out) Who was that?

GIRL

Mary.

BURGLAR

What's she doing?

BOY

Don't you tell him, Lou. Make him let you turn the light on.

GIRL (deciding to weep)

I'm afraid of the dark.

BURGLAR

Quit your bawling and put on the light.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

[The Boy puts on the light.

What's she doing?

GIRL

She's setting the burglar alarm for the night.

BURGLAR

How do I get out of here?

GIRL

You can't get out because if you open anything all the bells will ring and the police will come.

BOY (bravely stepping forward)

We'll put you in jail. (As the Burglar turns, however, he wilts)

GIRL

Billie, let's let him go if he tells us what nevertheless means.

BURGLAR

Huh?

GIRL

Do you know what nevertheless means?

BURGLAR

What's nevertheless?

GIRL

It's a word.

BURGLAR

What's the game?

BOY

If you know what nevertheless means we'll let you go.

GIRL

It's a compact.

BURGLAR

Promise you won't give me up.

GIRL

We won't give you up . . . Sit down.

NEVERTHELESS

[The Burglar sits.

BOY

Where's your pistol?

BURGLAR

I ain't got none.

GIRL

Oh, you mustn't say that.

BURGLAR

Well, I ain't.

GIRL

It's very wrong to say "I ain't." My mother would make us read all "The Narrow Path" if we talked like that.

BURGLAR (puzzled)

What!

BOY

They carry pistols in Texas.

BURGLAR

Well, I ain't never used none, and I ain't never been in Texas, and what's more I ain't never going to Texas!

GIRL

He's a very pleasant burglar, Billie.

BURGLAR

Well, I'm in a pickle, but I can't hurt no kids.

GIRL

See, Billie, how bad grammar sounds.

BURGLAR

I don't care nothing about grammar. When you have to paddle your own canoe, you can't take no time for grammar.

GIRL

Oh, dear Billie, don't ever paddle your own canoe . . . Billie . . . (She goes to whisper to the Boy) (To the Burglar, as she passes him)

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

Excuse me. (To the Boy) I'm going to try Mother's plan on him. I'm going to read to him!

[The Burglar rises and looks around.]

BOY (whispering)

I'm going to call father.

GIRL

Now, Billie, maybe we can make him good.

BOY

Well, he can't get away and he hasn't a pistol —

BURGLAR

Hey, quit your jawing and give me up if you want to.

GIRL

We're not going to give you up.

BURGLAR

Huh?

GIRL

We're going to read to you.

BURGLAR

Quit your kidding.

GIRL

How does it feel to be a burglar?

BURGLAR

Not so good.

GIRL

Aren't you afraid to be a burglar?

BOY

'Course not. Look how big he is.

GIRL

Aren't you ashamed to be a burglar?

BURGLAR

Well . . . I ain't never burgled before.

NEVERTHELESS

GIRL

Well, that's not so bad, but just the same we're going to read to you.

BURGLAR

What for?

GIRL

Because you use bad grammar.

BURGLAR

You're funny kids. Ain't you scared?

BOY (magnificently)

No!

BURGLAR (turning suddenly)

Huh?

[The Boy retreats ingloriously.

GIRL

You wouldn't hurt us, would you?

BURGLAR

Why wouldn't I?

GIRL

We didn't do anything to you.

BURGLAR

You trapped me.

GIRL

We didn't know you were coming.

BURGLAR

What was you hiding for?

GIRL

We expected someone else.

BURGLAR

Go on!

[The Boy moves a chair cautiously toward the Burglar and finally summons the courage to sit down beside him.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY (pleasantly)

Did you know Jessie James?

BURGLAR

I heard of him but I ain't never seen him.

GIRL

What made you begin?

BURGLAR

Never mind . . . I began and I got caught.
. . . Now what?

GIRL

I'm going to read to you.

BURGLAR (resignedly)

Go ahead.

GIRL

Do you want to read, Billie?

BOY (unselfishly)

No!

GIRL

This is all about the narrow path.

BURGLAR

Uh-huh.

GIRL (reading)

"The Narrow Path is very steep and straight. It leads to a land of gold and it is not easy to negotiate because Heaven thinks it is best for people to climb for what they want. Nevertheless —"

[The Boy and Girl burst out laughing so suddenly that the Burglar is quite startled.]

BURGLAR (uneasily)

What are you laughing at?

GIRL (pointing to "nevertheless")

It's such a funny word.

NEVERTHELESS

BURGLAR

Ain't it just like other words?

GIRL

Don't it look funny?

BOY

Don't it look funny?

GIRL

I mean doesn't it look funny?

[The three huddle together over the book.]

BURGLAR (muttering)

N-E-V-E-R-T-H-E-L-E-S-S. Huh! It does look sort o' funny . . . What's the rest of it?

GIRL (reading)

"Nevertheless the narrow path is not all hardship."

BURGLAR

Maybe not; but it was pretty hard for me.

GIRL

Have you tried it?

BURGLAR

Yep. But I slipped. . . . Go on.

GIRL (reading)

"On the other hand, the primrose path is broad and it slopes gently downward, but it leads to the land of thorns. Neverthe — (She turns a page) — less —"

[Again the children go into gales of laughter.]

BURGLAR

Huh?

GIRL

Look.

[Again they huddle over the book.]

BURGLAR

N-E-V-E-R-T-H-E-L-E-S-S. . . . It is funny.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

(He joins heartily in the laughter)

GIRL

You see — it's three words and they don't mean anything unless they are all huddled together just like we are now.

[They all laugh uproariously.]

BOY (on the friendliest of terms now)

Do you walk the primrose path?

BURGLAR

Go on! I'm in the land of thorns.

GIRL

Well, how did you get there if you didn't walk the primrose path?

BURGLAR

I just naturally fell.

GIRL

Don't you know the meaning of nevertheless?

BURGLAR

I sort o' know the meaning, but I can't put it into words.

GIRL

Can you act it out?

BURGLAR

Huh?

GIRL

Can you act it out?

BURGLAR

What do you mean — act it out?

GIRL

Sometimes when Billie and I can't put things into words we act it out. Like this: If I want to tell someone what revolves means, I just do this . . . and then they know.

NEVERTHELESS

BURGLAR

Aw, yes, you pretend!

GIRL

Oh . . . Well — Can't you p-p-pertend nevertheless?

BURGLAR

I hardly think so.

BOY

Did you get tired on the narrow path?

BURGLAR

Ye-eh . . . But I wish I hadn't.

GIRL

Can't you climb back?

BURGLAR

Nope. It's too late.

GIRL

Mother says it's never too late to do right.

BURGLAR

Sure it is. A man what's been in jail can't get straight again.

BOY (admiringly)

Have you been in jail?

BURGLAR

No, but once is enough.

GIRL

When are you going to jail?

BURGLAR

To-night, I guess.

BOY

What for?

BURGLAR

For breaking in here!

GIRL

We aren't going to send you to jail.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BURGLAR

Maybe not, but your paw and maw will.
(Whimsically) 'Sides I can't tell you what nevertheless means and I can't act it out. And a compact's a compact, ain't it?

GIRL

Mother won't put you in jail. She's too kind.

BOY (with sad memories)

But she's awful strict about grammar and ugly words.

GIRL

She says it's easy to walk the narrow path.

BOY

Father isn't so sure, but he says it can be done.

GIRL

Come on and we'll help you.

BURGLAR

Come on where?

BOY

Come on and walk the narrow path with us.

BURGLAR

Where is it?

GIRL

Here.

BURGLAR

What's the game?

GIRL

Mother says if we can walk a straight line out that door without wobbling, we can walk the narrow path all our lives without any trouble.

BOY

To speak of.

BURGLAR

What's on the other side of that door?

NEVERTHELESS

BOY and GIRL

Father and mother.

BURGLAR

You seem to be pretty straight kids, but it's too late for me.

GIRL

No, it isn't.

BURGLAR

Yes, it's too late. I'll take the back door and try to make my get-away.

GIRL

Billie, you ask him.

BOY

I'd like to have you come with us, sir. Dad's a fine man and mother's a great woman.

GIRL

All we have to do is to walk straight through that door without wobbling —

BOY

Come on —

BURGLAR

I think it's too late for me — nevertheless —
(He takes their hands)

GIRL (ecstatically)

Oh, he's acted out nevertheless! Billie, don't you see the real, honest, true, live meaning?
. . . Come on, let's start.

[They start carefully for the door and, as they come to the safe they stop. The Burglar looks ruefully at it a moment.]

GIRL

Don't wobble now. We've almost made it—
[They keep on for the door.]

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

Isn't it easy? And mother says if you can do this little bit, you can do it always.

[When they disappear through the door, the play is over.]

THE MEDICINE SHOW

LUT'ER
GIZ
DR. STEV'N VANDEXTER

The scene is on the south bank of the Ohio River. An old soap box, a log and a large stone are visible. The river is supposed to flow between the stage and the audience. In the background, at the top of the "grade" is the village of Rock Springs.

PROLOGUE

This is only a quarter of a play. Its faults are many. Come, glory in them with us.

You are a little boy once more lying on your rounded belly on the cool, damp sands beside the beautiful river. You are still young enough to see the wonder that everywhere touches the world; and men are in the world — all sorts of men. But you can still look upon them with the shining eyes of brotherhood. You can still feel the mystery that is true understanding. Everywhere about you men and things are reaching for the infinite, each in his own way, be it big or little, be it the moon or a medicine show; and you yourself are not yet decided whether to reach for the stars or go a-fishing. Brother!

[Lu'ter enters or rather oozes in.]

He is a tall, expressionless, uncoordinated person who might be called filthy were it not for the fact that the dirt on his skin and on his clothes seems an inherent part of him. He has a wan smile that — what there is of it — is not displeasing. Strangely enough, his face is always smooth-shaven. He carries a fishing pole made from a tree twig and equipped with a thread knotted frequently and a bent pin for hook.

Lu'ter looks about and his eyes light on the stone. He attempts to move it with his bare foot to the water's edge, but it is too heavy for him. Next he looks at the log, raises his foot to move it, then abandons the attempt because his eyes rest on the lighter soap box. This he puts in position never deigning to touch it with his hands. Then he sits calmly and drawing a fishing worm from the pocket of his shirt fastens it on the pin-hook and casts his line into the water. Thereafter he takes no apparent interest in fishing.

After a moment Giz enters.

Giz is somewhat dirtier than Lut'er but the dirt is less assimilated and consequently less to be condoned. Besides he is fuzzy with a beard of long standing. He may have been shaved some Saturdays ago — but quite ago.

Giz doesn't speak to Lut'er and Lut'er doesn't speak to Giz, but Lut'er suggests life by continued chewing and he acknowledges the proximity of Giz by spitting and wiping his lips with his hand. Giz having tried the log and the rock finally chooses the rock and acknowledges Lut'er's salivary greeting by spitting also; but he wipes his mouth on his sleeve.

After a moment he reaches forward with his bare foot and touches the water.

GIZ

'T's warm as fresh milk.

[Lut'er, not to be wholly unresponsive, spits. A fresh silence falls upon them.]

GIZ

'S Hattie Brown came in?

THE MEDICINE SHOW

[Lut'er spits and almost shakes his head negatively.

She's a mighty good little steam-boat.

LUT'ER

She's water-logged.

GIZ

She ain't water-logged.

LUT'ER

She is.

GIZ

She ain't.

LUT'ER

She is.

GIZ

She ain't. (The argument dies of malnutrition. After a moment of silence Giz speaks)

GIZ

'S river raisin'?

LUT'ER

Nup!

[Silence.

GIZ

Fallin'?

LUT'ER

Nup!

GIZ

Standin' still?

LUT'ER

Uh!

[The conversation might continue if Giz did not catch a mosquito on his leg.

GIZ

Gosh! A galler-nipper at noon day!

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

[Lut'er scratches back of his ear warily.

GIZ

An' look at the whelp!

[Giz scratches actively, examines the wound and anoints it with tobacco juice.

The Play would be ended at this moment for lack of varied action if Dr. Stev'n Vandexter did not enter.

He is an eager, healthy-looking man with a whitish beard that long washing in Ohio River water has turned yellowish. He wears spectacles and his clothes and general appearance are somewhat an improvement upon Lut'er and Giz. Furthermore he wears what were shoes and both supports of his suspenders are fairly intact. He is whittling a piece of white pine with a large jack-knife.

Seeing Lut'er and Giz he draws the log between them and sits.

After a moment in which three cuds are audibly chewed, Dr. Stev'n speaks.

DOCTOR

What gits me is how they done it.

[For the first time Lut'er turns his head as admission that some one is there.

Giz looks up with a dawn of interest under his beard.

Silence.

DOCTOR

I traded a two pound catfish for a box of that salve: an' I don't see how they done it.

[Lut'er having turned his head keeps it turned. Evidently Dr. Stev'n always has something of interest to say.

THE MEDICINE SHOW

GIZ

Kickapoo?

DOCTOR

Ye'. Kickapoo Indian Salve. I don't think no Indian never seen it. (He looks at Giz for acquiescence)

GIZ

Y'ain't never sure about nothin' these days.
[Dr. Stev'n looks at Lut'er for acquiescence also, and Lut'er approving turns his head forward and spits assent.]

DOCTOR

I smelled it an' it smelled like ker'sene. I biled it an' it biled over an' burnt up like ker'sene. . . . I don't think it was nothin' but ker'sene an' lard.

GIZ

Reckon 't wuz common ker'sene?

DOCTOR

I don't know whether 't wuz common ker'sene but I know 't wuz ker'sene. . . . An' I bet ker'sene'll cure heaps o' troubles if yer use it right.

GIZ

That air doctor said the salve ud cure most anything.

LUT'ER (as though a voice from the grave, long forgotten)

Which doctor?

GIZ

The man doctor — him with the p'inted muss-tash.

LUT'ER

I seen him take a egg outer Jimmie Weldon's

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

ear — an' Jimmie swore he didn't have no hen in his head.

DOCTOR

But the lady doctor said it warn't so good — effie-cacious she called it — withouten you took two bottles o' the buildin' up medicine, a box o' the liver pills an' a bottle o' the hair fluid.

GIZ

She knowed a lot. She told me just how I felt an' she said she hated to trouble me but I had a internal ailment. An' she said I needed all their medicine jus' like the Indians used it. But I told her I didn't have no money so she said maybe the box o' liver pills would do if I'd bring 'em some corn for their supper.

DOCTOR

Y' got the liver pills?

GIZ

Uh-huh.

LUT'ER

Took any?

GIZ

Nup, I'm savin' 'em.

LUT'ER

What fur?

GIZ

Till I'm feelin' sicker'n I am now.

DOCTOR

Where are they?

GIZ

In m' pocket.

[They chew in silence for a minute.]

DOCTOR

Yes, sir! It smelled like ker'sene ter me —

THE MEDICINE SHOW

and ker'sene 't wuz. . . . Ker'sene'll cure heaps o' things if you use it right.

[He punctuates his talk with covert glances at Giz. His thoughts are on the pills.]

DOCTOR

Which pocket yer pills in, Giz?

GIZ (discouragingly)

M' hip pocket.

[Again they chew.]

DOCTOR

The Family Medicine Book where I learned ter be a doctor said camphor an' ker'sene an' lard rubbed on flannel an' put on the chest 'ud cure tizic, maybe. (He looks at Giz)

DOCTOR

An' what ud cure tizic ought ter cure anything, I think. . . . I'd 'a' cured m' second wife if the winder hadn't blowed out an' she got kivered with snow. After that she jus' wheezed until she couldn't wheeze no longer. An' so when I went courtin' m' third wife, I took a stitch in time an' told her about the camphor an' ker'sen an' lard. (Ruefully) She's a tur'ble healthy woman. (His feelings and his curiosity having overcome his tact, he blurts out) Giz, why'n
th' hell don't yer show us yer pills!

GIZ

Well — if yer wanner see 'em — here they air.
[He takes the dirty, mashed box out of his hip pocket and hands it to the Doctor.]

The Doctor opens the box and smells the pills.

DOCTOR

Ker'sene. . . . Smell 'em Lut'er. (He holds the box close to Lut'er's nose)

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

LUT'ER (with the least possible expenditure of energy)

Uh!

DOCTOR

Ker'sene! . . . Well, I guess it's good for the liver, too. . . . Gimme one, Giz?

GIZ

I ain't got so many I can be givin' 'em ter everybody.

DOCTOR

Jus' one, Giz.

GIZ

She said I ought ter take 'em all fer a cure.

LUT'ER

What yer got, Giz? (Calling a man by name is a great effort for Lut'er)

GIZ

Mostly a tired feelin' an' sometimes a crick in th' back. (Lut'er displays a sympathy undreamed of)

LUT'ER

Gimme one, Giz.

GIZ

Gosh! You want th' whole box, don't yer?

LUT'ER

Keep yer pills. (He spits)

DOCTOR

What's ailin' you, Lut'er?

LUT'ER

Oh, a tired feelin' (there is a long moment of suspended animation, but the Doctor knows that the mills of the gods grind slowly — and he waits for Lut'er to continue) an' a crick in m' back.

“THE MEDICINE-SHOW”

The Doctor “swaps” a chew of tobacco for a pill from Giz

THE MEDICINE SHOW

DOCTOR

I'll cure yer, Lut'er. (Lut'er just looks) If that Kickapoo doctor with the p'inted muss-tash kin cure yer, I guess I can.

GIZ (who has been thinking pretty hard) Got any terbaccer, Doc?

DOCTOR

Yep.

GIZ

Well, here's a pill fer a chaw. (He and the Doctor rise)

[Giz takes a pill out of the box and the Doctor takes his tobacco from his pocket, reaches out his hand for the pill and holds out the tobacco placing his thumb definitely on the plug so that Giz can bite off so much and no more. Giz bites and the Doctor takes over the pill.]

Lut'er not to be outdone takes a battered plug of tobacco from his pocket and bites off an unlimited "chaw."

The Doctor takes his knife from his pocket and cuts the pill, smelling it.

DOCTOR

Ker'sene! (He tastes it) Ker'sene! Now I been thinkin' things over, Lut'er and Giz . . .

[He tastes the pill again.]

Ker'sene, sure!

[He sits down on the log once more, spits carefully and crosses his legs.]

I got a business proposition to make.

[Silence.]

Lut'er spits and crosses his legs, and Giz just spits.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

DOCTOR

There ain't enough home industry here in Rock Springs. We got a canning fact'ry and a stea'mill; but here comes a medicine show from Ioway — a Kickapoo Indian Medicine Show from Ioway! Now — what we need in Rock Springs is a medicine show! (He waits for the effect upon his audience)

LUT'ER (after a pause)

How yer goin' ter git it?

DOCTOR

Well, here's my proposition. Ain't we got as much horse sense as them Ioway Indians?

LUT'ER

A damn sight more. (That is the evident answer to the Doctor, but Lut'er develops a further idea) We got the country from the Indians.

GIZ (after a moment of accumulating admiration)

By golly, Lut'er, yer right.

DOCTOR

Now, I got some medicine science. I'd 'a' cured my second wife if it hadn't been for that busted winder.

GIZ

Yeh, but what come o' yer first wife?

DOCTOR

I could 'a' cured her, too, only I hadn't found the Family Medicine Book then.

LUT'ER

Well, what I want'er know is — what's yer proposition . . . I'm in a hurry. . . . Here comes the Hattie Brown.

THE MEDICINE SHOW

[The Hattie Brown and the whistle of the stea'mill indicate noon.

Lut'er takes in the line — removes the fishing worm and puts it in his pocket.

DOCTOR

Well, I'll make the salve an' do the talkin'; Giz'll sort o' whoop things up a bit and Lut'er'll git cured.

LUT'ER

What'll I git cured of?

DOCTOR

Oh, lumbago an' tired feelin' . . . crick in the back and tizic.

LUT'ER

But who'll take a egg out o' somebody's ear?

DOCTOR

Giz'll learn that.

LUT'ER (with a wan smile that memory illuminates)

An' who'll play the pianny?

DOCTOR

Besteena, my daughter.

LUT'ER

Where we goin'?

DOCTOR

We'll go ter Lavanny first.

LUT'ER

How'll we git there?

DOCTOR

Walk — unless somebody gives us a tote.

GIZ

We kin go in my John-boat.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

LUT'ER

Who'll row? (There is fear in his voice)

GIZ

We'll take turns. (Lut'er looks with terror upon Giz)

LUT'ER

How fur is it?

DOCTOR

Three an' a half mile. . . . Will yer go, Lut'er?

LUT'ER (evidently thinking deeply)

How fur is it?

GIZ

Three an' a half mile.

DOCTOR

Will yer go, Lut'er?

LUT'ER

Uh-h.

DOCTOR

Huh?

GIZ

He said, uh-huh.

[Lut'er chews in silence.]

DOCTOR

I thought he said uh-uh.

GIZ

He said uh-huh.

DOCTOR

He didn't say nothin' o' the sort — he said uh-uh.

[They turn to Lut'er questioningly. He is chewing intensely.]

LUT'ER (after a moment)

How fur did yer say it wuz?

THE MEDICINE SHOW

DOCTOR

Three an' a half mile.

[Silence.]

GIZ

We'll each take a oar.

[Silence.]

A stentorian voice is heard calling Stee'un.

The Doctor rises, hastily.

DOCTOR

What d'yer say, Lut'er?

LUT'ER

It's three an' a half mile ter Lavanny — an' three an' a half mile back. . . . Pretty fur.

DOCTOR

We kin come back on the current.

LUT'ER

Three an' a half mile air three an' a half mile — current or no current.

[Again the masterful female voice calls Stee'un. There is no mistaking its meaning.]

The Doctor is torn between home and business.

Lut'er takes up his rod, rebaits the hook with the fishing-worm from his pocket and casts his line into the river.

LUT'ER

I'll think it over . . . but I ain't givin' yuh no hope . . . Three an' a half mile one way air pretty fur . . . but two ways — it's turruble!

DOCTOR

Come on, Giz. We'll talk it over.

[The Doctor and Giz leave Lut'er to his problem.]

Lut'er is undecided. He is at a crisis in his life.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

He spits thoughtfully and looks after the retreating Doctor and Giz.

LUT'ER

Three an' a half mile . . . (He takes in his line and removes the fishing-worm. He rises and looks again after the Doctor and Giz. He hesitates) . . . two ways . . . (He starts in the opposite direction, as he justifies himself to his inner self) Rock Springs is fur enough fur me! (When he disappears the play is over.)

SIX WHO PASS WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

THE BOY
THE QUEEN THE MIME
THE MILKMAID
THE BLINDMAN
THE BALLAD-SINGER
THE DREADFUL HEADSMAN
YOU (in the audience)

The Scene is a kitchen.
The Period is when you will.

[Before the opening of the curtains the Prologue enters upon the forestage and summons the Device-Bearer who carries a large copper pot.

PROLOGUE

This is a copper pot. (The Device-Bearer shows it to the audience carefully) It is filled with boiling water. (The Device-Bearer makes the sound of bubbling water) It is on the fire. See the flames. (The Device-Bearer sets the pot in the center of the forestage and blows under it with a pair of bellows) And see the water boiling over. (The Device-Bearer again makes the sound of bubbling water and then withdraws to where he can see the play from the side of the forestage) We are looking into the kitchen of the Boy whose mother left him alone. I do not know where she has gone but I do know that he is gathering lentils now.

YOU

What are lentils?

PROLOGUE

A lentil? Why a lentil, don't you see, is not a bean nor yet a pea; but it is kin to both . . . You must imagine that the boy has built the fire and set the water boiling. He is very industrious but you need not feel sorry for him. His mother is very good to him and he is safe. Are you ready now? . . . Very well. Be quiet.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

[The Prologue claps his hands twice.

The curtains open and a kitchen is disclosed. There are a bench, a stool and a cupboard. A great door at the back opens into a corridor. There are also two windows — one higher than the other looking upon the corridor. At the right a door opens into the bedroom of the Boy's mother. A great pewter spoon lies upon the shelf in the cupboard.

A large Butterfly comes in through the doorway, flits about and looks off stage.

The song of the Boy is heard from the garden. The Butterfly goes to the door, poises a moment, then alights on the cupboard.

The Boy enters with a great bowl filled with lentils.

The Butterfly flies to the bowl and satisfied returns to the cupboard.

The Boy smiles at the Butterfly but he does not touch him. Then he empties the lentils into the pot and water splashes on his careless hand. A moan is heard in the distance. The Boy and the Butterfly go to the door.

The Queen's voice is heard calling:

Butterfly, Butterfly, where shall I hide?

[Enter the Queen.]

QUEEN

Boy, Boy — oh, I am distraught!

YOU

What is distraught?

PROLOGUE

Distraught means distracted, perplexed, beset with doubt, worried by some fear.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY (pityingly)

Why are you distraught?

QUEEN

Oh — Oh — Oh — They are going to behead me!

BOY

When?

→ QUEEN

Before mid-day.

BOY

Why are they going to behead you? Is it a story? Tell it to me.

QUEEN

I was guilty of a breach of etiquette.

BOY

What is that?

QUEEN

I did something that was considered bad manners and the law says the punishment is decapitation.

YOU

What is decapitation?

PROLOGUE

Decapitation is beheading; cutting off one's head.

BOY

Why, only kings and queens can be decapitated.

QUEEN

Oh, I know — I know —

BOY (disappointed)

Are you a queen?

QUEEN

Yes.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY

I thought all queens were big. My mother says they are always regal. And my mother knows.

QUEEN

Oh, I am the queen. I am the queen; but I am so unhappy.

BOY

My mother told me kings and queens knew no fear? Why, you're afraid.

QUEEN

Oh, Boy, Boy, I am your queen and I am afraid and unhappy. And queens are just like other people when they are afraid and unhappy.

BOY (disappointed)

Aren't they always regal?

QUEEN

No — no. Oh, little boy, hide me, hide me from the Dreadful Headsman!

BOY

I haven't any place to hide you. You couldn't get under the bench and you couldn't get into the cupboard.

QUEEN

Little boy, can't you see that I shall lose my head if I am found?

BOY

You might have hidden in the pot if I hadn't put it on the fire.

QUEEN

Oh — Oh — Oh —

BOY

I'm sorry.

QUEEN

I am distraught.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY

Well, I'll hide you, because you are distraught; but — I am not sure you are a queen . . . Where's your crown? You can't be a queen without a crown!

[She reaches up to her head.]

QUEEN

Oh, I was running so fast that it must have slipped from my head. (Sees the Butterfly) Butterfly, tell him I am your Queen.

[The Butterfly flies to her head and lights on her disheveled locks like a diadem.]

BOY

Oh, I have talked to the Queen! . . . You can hide in my mother's bed-room in there; but first please tell me a story.

QUEEN

They will find me here. I'll tell you a story afterward.

BOY

I want you to tell me now.

QUEEN

Well, you watch at the door and warn me when you see someone coming. (The Butterfly brushes her ear) But stay, the Butterfly says he'll watch.

[The Butterfly goes to the door.]

BOY

Will he know?

QUEEN

Oh, yes. He is a wonderful butterfly — wise beyond his years.

BOY

Sit down and tell me your story. (He places

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

a black pillow for the Queen on the step and an orange pillow for himself)

QUEEN

Last night we celebrated the second year of peace with the neighboring kingdom. We were dancing the minuet just after the banquet, when I stepped on the ring-toe of my husband the King's great aunt.

BOY

Didn't you say excuse me?

QUEEN

It was useless. The law says that if a queen steps on the ring-toe of the King's great aunt or any member of her family the Queen must be beheaded while the King's four clocks are striking twelve at mid-day.

BOY

Oh, that means to-day?

QUEEN

Yes.

BOY

Why, it's almost mid-day now. See, I've just set the lentils boiling.

QUEEN

If you can hide me until after the King's four clocks strike twelve I shall be safe.

BOY

Why are there four clocks?

QUEEN

Because the law allows only one clock for each tower in the castle.

BOY

Then I hear all the King's clocks every day!

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

There's a big clock, and two clocks not so big, and a tiny little clock.

QUEEN

Yes, those are the four.

BOY

Why will you be safe after the four clocks strike twelve?

QUEEN

Because that is the law.

BOY

Aren't laws funny?

QUEEN

Funny? This one is very sad, I think.

BOY

Mightn't it be twelve any mid-day?

QUEEN

No; the Prime Minister of my grandfather who passed the law decided that it meant only the following mid-day.

BOY (rising and rushing to the door)

They'll find you here.

QUEEN (rising calmly)

Oh, no, this is the short cut to the beheading block. Through that corridor.

BOY

Why didn't you run the other way?

QUEEN

Because they always search for escaped people in that direction. So I ran through your garden and into this room. They'll never search for me so close to the castle.

BOY

How did you escape?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

QUEEN

I —

[The Butterfly seems agitated.]

BOY

You —

QUEEN

Someone is coming. Hide me!

BOY

In here — in my mother's room. 'Sh! 'Sh!

[The Queen goes out.]

Enter the Mime.

He pokes his head in the lower window and peeps around the door.

The boy turns.

BOY (weakly)

Are you the Dreadful Headsman?

MIME

What?

BOY

Are you the Dreadful Headsman?

MIME

Do I look like a headsman?

BOY

I don't know; I've never seen one.

MIME

Well, suppose I am.

BOY

Are you?

MIME

Maybe I am.

BOY

Oh!

MIME

Booh!

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY

I'm — I'm — not afraid.

MIME

Bah!

BOY

And my mother isn't here.

MIME

Br — r — r — r!

[The Boy reaches for his knife.]

MIME

Bing!

BOY

I wasn't going to hurt you!

MIME

'Sh! . . . 'Sh! . . . 'Sh! . . .

BOY

I'll give you my knife if you'll go 'way.

MIME

Ah,— ha!

BOY

It's nearly mid-day and you'd better go.

MIME

Well, give me the knife.

BOY

Promise me to go.

MIME (laughs, turning away)

Aren't you going to the beheading?

BOY

No. I have to boil the lentils for our mid-day meal.

MIME

May I come back and eat some?

BOY

You'll have to ask my mother.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

MIME

Where is she?

BOY

She's over that way. She went to the market to buy a bobbin.

YOU

What is a bobbin?

PROLOGUE

A bobbin is a spool upon which thread is wound, and it is sharp at one end so that it can be easily passed backward and forward, to and fro, through the other threads in making lace.

MIME (starting off)

Well, I'll be back to eat some lentils.

BOY (too eagerly)

You'd better hurry.

MIME

You seem to want to get rid of me.

BOY (allaying suspicion)

Well, I think you'd better go or you'll be late — and it's very wrong to be late.

MIME (going toward the door)

I think I'll (changing his mind) sit down.

BOY (disappointed)

Oh!

MIME

What would you say if I wasn't the Headsman?

BOY

But you said you were.

MIME

I said maybe I was.

BOY

Aren't you?

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

MIME

Maybe I'm not.

BOY

Honest?

MIME

Um, hum.

BOY (relieved)

Oh! . . .

MIME

You were afraid.

BOY

No . . . I wasn't.

MIME

Would you fight?

BOY

You bet I would.

MIME

It wouldn't take me a minute to lick you.

BOY

Maybe it wouldn't, but I wouldn't give up right away. That would be cowardly. . . . Who are you?

MIME

I'm a mime —

BOY

What's a mime?

MIME

A mime's a mime.

BOY

Go on and tell me.

MIME

A mime's a mountebank.

BOY

What's a mountebank?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

MIME

Where is she?

BOY

She's over that way. She went to the market to buy a bobbin.

YOU

What is a bobbin?

PROLOGUE

A bobbin is a spool upon which thread is wound, and it is sharp at one end so that it can be easily passed backward and forward, to and fro, through the other threads in making lace.

MIME (starting off)

Well, I'll be back to eat some lentils.

BOY (too eagerly)

You'd better hurry.

MIME

You seem to want to get rid of me.

BOY (allaying suspicion)

Well, I think you'd better go or you'll be late — and it's very wrong to be late.

MIME (going toward the door)

I think I'll (changing his mind) sit down.

BOY (disappointed)

Oh!

MIME

What would you say if I wasn't the Headsman?

BOY

But you said you were.

MIME

I said maybe I was.

BOY

Aren't you?

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

MIME

Maybe I'm not.

BOY

Honest?

MIME

Um, hum.

BOY (relieved)

Oh! . . .

MIME

You were afraid.

BOY

No . . . I wasn't.

MIME

Would you fight?

BOY

You bet I would.

MIME

It wouldn't take me a minute to lick you.

BOY

Maybe it wouldn't, but I wouldn't give up right away. That would be cowardly. . . . Who are you?

MIME

I'm a mime —

BOY

What's a mime?

MIME

A mime's a mime.

BOY

Go on and tell me.

MIME

A mime's a mountebank.

BOY

What's a mountebank?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

MIME

A mountebank's a strolling player.

BOY

Are you going to perform for me?

MIME

Not to-day — I'm on my way to the decapitation.

BOY

Do you want to see the decapitation?

MIME

Well, yes. But most of all I want to pick up a few coins.

BOY

How?

MIME

Why, I'll perform after the Queen has lost her head.

BOY

Won't you be too sorry?

MIME

No. You see, I'll be thinking mostly about what I'm going to do. I have to do my best because it is hard to be more interesting than a decapitation. And after it's all over the crowd will begin to talk and to move about: and I'll have to rush up to the front of them and cry out at the top of my lungs, "Stop — Ho, for Jack the Juggler! Would you miss him? In London where the king of kings lives, all the knights and ladies of the Court would leave a crowning to watch Jack the Juggler toss three golden balls with one hand or balance a weather-vane upon his nose." Then a silence will come upon the crowd and they will all turn to me.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

Someone will say, "Where is this Jack the Juggler?" And I shall answer, "Jack the Juggler, the greatest of the great, the pet of kings, entertainer to the Pope and the joy of Cathay stands before you." And I'll throw back my cloak and stand revealed. So! Someone will then shout, "Let us have it, Jack." So I'll draw my three golden balls from my pouch — like this — and then begin.

[The Boy is watching breathlessly and the Butterfly is interested too. Their disappointment is keen when Jack does nothing.]

BOY

Aren't you going to show me?

MIME

No, I must be off.

BOY

Aren't you ever coming back?

MIME

Maybe, yes; perhaps, no.

BOY

I'll give you some lentils if you'll juggle the balls for me.

MIME (sniffs the pot)

They aren't cooked yet.

BOY

Let me hold your golden balls.

MIME (Takes a gold ball from his pouch and lets the Boy hold it)

Here's one.

BOY

And do they pay you well?

MIME (taking the ball from the Boy)

Ay, that they do. If I am as interesting as the beheading I'll get perhaps fifteen farthings in money and other things that I can exchange for food and raiment.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY

I'm going to be a mime and buy a castle and a sword.

MIME

Maybe so and maybe not. Who knows? . . .

Good-bye. (He goes out)

BOY (to the Butterfly)

If he had been the Dreadful Headsman I would have slain him. So! . . . "Ah, wicked headsman, you shall not behead the Queen! . . . Cross not that threshold or I'll run you through."

[Throughout this the Butterfly shows great interest and enters into the spirit of it, being absorbed at times and frightened at others.

Enter the Milkmaid at door.

MILKMAID

Pst! . . . Pst!

BOY (startled)

Oh!

MILKMAID

Are you going to the decapitation?

BOY

No. Are you?

MILKMAID

That I am.

BOY

Will your mother let you go?

MILKMAID

She doesn't know.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY

Did you run away?

MILKMAID

No. I went out to milk the cow.

BOY

And did you do it?

MILKMAID

Yes.

BOY

Why didn't you wait until you came back?

MILKMAID

My mother was looking and I had to let her see me doing something.

BOY

How did you get away when you took the milk pails into the house?

MILKMAID

I didn't take them in. As soon as my mother turned her back I hid the pails and I ran through here to take a short cut.

BOY

Where did you hide the milk?

MILKMAID

In the hollow tree.

BOY

Won't it sour?

MILKMAID

Maybe.

BOY

Won't your mother scold you?

MILKMAID

Yes, of course, but I couldn't miss the beheading.

BOY

Will you take the sour milk home?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

MILKMAID

Yes, and after my mother scolds me I'll make it into nice cheese and sell it to the King's Cook and then mother will forgive me.

BOY (sniffing the pot)

You'd better hurry. It's nearly mid-day. Don't you smell the lentils?

MILKMAID

The headsman hasn't started yet.

BOY (giggling)

He'd better hurry.

MILKMAID

They can't find the Queen.

BOY (so innocently)

Did she escape?

MILKMAID

Yes.

BOY

Are they hunting for her?

MILKMAID

Yes, and they've offered a big reward to the person who finds her.

BOY

How much?

MILKMAID

A pail of gold and a pair of finger rings.

BOY

That's a good deal . . . with a pail of gold I could buy my mother a velvet dress and a silken kerchief and a bonnet made of cloth of gold — and I could buy myself a milk-white palfry.

MILKMAID

And you'd never have to work again.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY

But she's such a gentle queen. Where are they hunting her?

MILKMAID

Everywhere.

BOY

Everywhere! . . . Maybe she's waiting at the beheading block.

MILKMAID

Silly goose! She wouldn't try to escape this way. She'd go in the opposite direction.

BOY

Do people always run in the opposite direction?

MILKMAID

Of course, everybody knows that.

BOY

I wish I could go.

MILKMAID

Come on.

BOY

Um — uh. The lentils might burn.

MILKMAID

Pour some cold water on them.

BOY

Um — uh. I promised I wouldn't leave the house.

MILKMAID

Oh, it will be wonderful!

BOY

The Mime will be there.

MILKMAID

The one with the long cloak and the golden balls?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY

Um — uh.

MILKMAID

Ooh!

BOY

How did you know?

MILKMAID

I saw him on the way to the market one day — and when my mother wasn't looking at me I gave him a farthing.

BOY

Is he a good juggler?

MILKMAID

He's magic! Why, he can throw three golden balls in the air and catch them with one hand and then keep them floating in the air in a circle.

BOY

And can he balance a weathervane on his nose while it's turning?

MILKMAID

Yes, and he can balance an egg on the end of a long stick that is balanced on his chin!

BOY

Oh — I wish I could see him. (Looks at the pot to see if the lentils are done)

MILKMAID

Come on!

BOY

Well — (Begins to weaken and just as he is about to start, the Butterfly flits past him into the Queen's room)

MILKMAID

Oh — what a lovely butterfly!

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY

No — No — I can't go. But you had better hurry.

MILKMAID

Well, I'll try to catch the butterfly first.

BOY

Oh, no, you mustn't touch that butterfly.

MILKMAID

Why?

BOY

Because — because he's my friend.

MILKMAID

Silly!

BOY

He is a good friend and he's the wisest butterfly in the world.

MILKMAID

What can he do?

BOY

He can almost talk.

MILKMAID

Almost? . . . Oh, I know. I'm a goose. You want to play a trick on me so I'll miss the beheading.

BOY

You'd better hurry.

MILKMAID

I wish you'd come.

BOY (sadly)

I can't. I've a duty to perform.

MILKMAID

Aren't duties always hard? (Both sigh)

[She takes up her milk pail.]

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY

What are you going to do with that pail?

MILKMAID

I'm going to stand on it. . . . Good-bye. (She goes out)

BOY

Good-bye. (He watches for a moment, then goes to the pot and tries the lentils; then whispers through door to the Queen) The lentils are getting soft.

[There is a fumbling in the passage and a voice is heard, Help the blind. Help the blind.

The Butterfly returns to the top of the cupboard. The Blindman appears at the door.

PROLOGUE

He's blind, but he'll show you how the blind can see.

BLINDMAN (sniffing)

Cooking lentils?

BOY

Yes.

BLINDMAN

Cook, which way to the beheading?

BOY

Keep straight ahead — the way you are going, old man.

BLINDMAN

Don't you want to take me with you?

BOY

I'm not going.

BLINDMAN

Not going to the beheading?

BOY

No, I have to cook the lentils.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BLINDMAN

Come on and go with me and maybe I'll give you a farthing.

BOY

I can't.

BLINDMAN

Yes, you can. Who else is here?

BOY (swallowing: it's hard to fib)

No one.

BLINDMAN

Can't you run away? Your mother won't know you've gone.

BOY

It's my duty to stay here.

BLINDMAN

It's your duty to help a poor, blindman, little boy.

BOY

Are you stone blind?

BLINDMAN

Yes.

BOY

Then how did you know I was a little boy?

BLINDMAN

Because you sound like a little boy.

BOY

Well, if you're stone blind why do you want to go to the beheading?

BLINDMAN

I can see with my ears.

BOY

Aw —

BLINDMAN

Didn't I know you were a little boy?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY

Yes, but you had to guess twice. First you thought I was a cook.

BLINDMAN

Well, aren't you cooking lentils?

BOY

Yes; but you can smell them.

BLINDMAN

Well, I see with my nose, too.

BOY

Aw — how can you see with your nose?

BLINDMAN

If you give me some bread I'll show you.

BOY

I can't give you any bread, but I'll give you some raw lentils.

BLINDMAN

All right. Give me lentils.

BOY

. . . I'll put them by the pot — Ready.

BLINDMAN

All right. (Sniffs. Walks to the pot and gets lentils and puts them in an old pouch) Isn't that seeing with my nose?

BOY

H'm! (in wonder) Now see with your ears and I'll give you some more lentils.

BLINDMAN

All right. Speak.

[The Boy gets behind the stool and speaks.

The Blindman goes toward him. The Boy moves around stealthily.

BLINDMAN

You're cheating. You've moved.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY (jumping up on the bench)

Well, where am I?

BLINDMAN

You're standing on something.

BOY

How did you guess it?

BLINDMAN

I didn't guess it. I know it.

BOY

Why can't I do that?

BLINDMAN

You can if you try; but it takes practice.

BOY

Can you see the door now?

BLINDMAN

No. I've turned around too many times. Besides there is more than one door.

BOY

Oh — m-m . . . You aren't really blind!

BLINDMAN

Blind people learn to use what they have. Once I too could see with my eyes.

BOY

Just like me?

BLINDMAN

Yes. And then I didn't take the trouble to see with my ears and my nose and my fingers — after I became blind I had to learn . . . Why, I can tell whether a man who passes me at the palace gate is a poor man or a noble or a merchant.

BOY

How can you do that?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BLINDMAN

By the sound of the step.

BOY

Aw — how can you do that?

BLINDMAN

Shut your eyes and try it.

BOY

Well, I know what you are. That would be easy.

BLINDMAN

I'll pretend I'm somebody else. (Feels with his stick; touches bench. Feels around again)

BOY

Why are you doing that?

BLINDMAN

To see how far I can walk without bumping into something.

BOY

Um —

BLINDMAN

Ready.

BOY (hides face in hands)

Yes.

BLINDMAN

Don't peep. (The Boy tries hard not to)

BOY

I won't.

BLINDMAN

All ready (shuffles like a commoner). Who was it?

BOY

A poor man.

BLINDMAN

See how easy?

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY

I could see him as plain as if I had my eyes open
. . . Now try me again.

BLINDMAN

Ready.

BOY

All right. (The Blindman seems to grow in height. His face is filled with a rare brightness. He steadies himself a moment and then walks magnificently down the room)

BOY (in beautiful wonder)

A noble! I could see him.

BLINDMAN

All you have to do is try.

BOY

I always thought it was terrible to be blind.

BLINDMAN

Sometimes it is.

BOY

But I thought everything was black.

BLINDMAN

It used to be until I taught myself how to see.

BOY

Why is it terrible sometimes?

BLINDMAN

Because I cannot help the poor who need help.
If I had money I could feed the hungry and clothe the poor little beggar children in winter!

BOY

Would a pail of gold and a pair of finger rings help you feed the hungry and clothe the poor, little beggar children in winter?

III

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BLINDMAN

A pail of gold! I have dreamed of what I might do with so much wealth!

BOY

I can get a pail of gold if I break a promise.

BLINDMAN

Would you break a promise?

BOY

. . . No — but — No!

BLINDMAN

Of course you wouldn't.

BOY

I couldn't break a promise for two pails of gold.

BLINDMAN

Nor twenty-two, little boy.

BOY

When you walked like a noble I saw a beautiful man behind my eyes with a crown of gold.

BLINDMAN

If you broke a promise for a pail of gold and two finger rings you would never see a beautiful noble with a crown of gold when you closed your eyes . . .

BOY

Can blind men see beautiful things even when it's rainy?

BLINDMAN

Blindmen can always see beautiful things if they try. Clouds and rain are beautiful to me — and when I get wet I think of the sunshine. I saw sunshine with my eyes when I was a little boy. Now I see it with my whole body when it warms me. I saw rain with my eyes when I was a little boy. Now I see it with my hands when it falls on them — drop — drop — drop — dropity — dropity — and I love it because it makes the lentils grow.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY

I never thought of that. Rain makes me stay indoors and I never like it except in June.

BLINDMAN

You don't have to stay in for long.

BOY

Can blind men see beautiful things in a be-heading?

BLINDMAN

No. But I must be there with the crowd. I shall tell stories to the people and perhaps they will give me food or money.

BOY

Can't you stay and tell me stories?

BLINDMAN

No. I must be on my way . . . If I do not see the beheading I cannot tell about it when I meet someone who was not there. Oh, I shall make a thrilling tale of it.

BOY

Tell it to me when you come back.

BLINDMAN

If you give me some cooked lentils.

BOY

I'll save you some.

BLINDMAN

Are the lentils nearly done?

BOY

Half.

BLINDMAN

I must be on my way then . . . Good-bye.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

(Starting to go in the wrong direction)

BOY

Here's the door.

BLINDMAN

Thank you, little boy . . . Don't forget to see with your ears and nose and fingers.

[The Blindman goes out.]

BOY

I won't.

BLINDMAN

Good-bye.

BOY

Good-bye. (The Boy covers his eyes and tries to see with his ears and his nose) It's easier with the ears.

[Singing is heard.]

Enter the Ballad-Singer.

Hello!

BOY

Hello!

SINGER

How are you?

BOY

I'm very well.

SINGER

That's good.

BOY

Thank you.

SINGER

Cooking?

BOY

Yes.

SINGER (coming into the room)

Something good?

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY

Lentils.

SINGER

Give me some?

BOY

They aren't done.

SINGER

Nearly. I can smell them.

BOY

Do you like them?

SINGER

When I'm hungry.

BOY

Are you hungry now?

SINGER

I'm always hungry. (They laugh)

BOY

Were you singing?

SINGER

Yes.

BOY

Do you like to sing?

SINGER

When I get something for my ballads.

BOY

Are you a ballad-singer?

SINGER

Yes.

BOY

Sing one for me?

SINGER

Give me some lentils?

BOY

I'll give you some raw lentils.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

SINGER

I want some of the cooked ones.

BOY

They aren't done.

SINGER

Are they nearly done?

BOY

More than half.

SINGER

I like them that way.

BOY

All right. Sing me a ballad.

SINGER

Well, give me the lentils first.

BOY

Oh, no, sing the ballad first.

SINGER

No, sir, give me the lentils first.

BOY

That isn't fair.

SINGER

Why not? After I sing to you maybe you won't pay me.

BOY

Yes, I will.

SINGER

Then why not pay me first?

BOY

You might not sing.

SINGER (laughing)

Yes, I will.

BOY (laughing)

Well, I'll give you some lentils at the end of each verse.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

SINGER

That's a bargain.

BOY

Sing.

SINGER (sings one line)

Six stalwart sons the miller had —
Give me the lentils.

BOY

Finish that verse.

SINGER

I did finish it.

BOY

Now that's not fair. You only sang a line.

SINGER

Well, a line's a verse.

BOY (with a gesture that indicates how long a verse ought to be)

I meant a whole verse.

SINGER (mimicking the gesture)

A line's a whole verse.

BOY

Oh, now, be fair, I mean a whole, whole verse.

SINGER

You mean a stanza.

BOY

I always heard it called a verse.

SINGER

Well, keep the bargain. I sang a verse. Give me some lentils.

BOY (rising and taking a very few lentils on his spoon)

Next time I mean a stanza . . . Here are some lentils.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

[The Ballad-Singer eyes the meager portion, cools it and eats.]

SINGER

Stingy.

BOY

Isn't that some lentils?

SINGER (laughs)

Well —

BOY

Now begin again.

SINGER

At the end of every stanza a spoonful of lentils.

BOY

I didn't say a spoonful.

SINGER (starts to go)

Very well, I won't sing a ballad.

BOY

All right. I'll give you a spoonful at the end of each — stanza. (He sits on the floor by the pot of lentils)

SINGER (sings)

The Ballad of the Miller and His Six Sons

Six stalwart sons the miller had

All brave and fair to see —

He taught them each a worthy trade —

And they grew gallantly.

Tara — da — da — da-da-da — da-da-da

Tara — da — da — da-de — da-dee.

Give me some lentils.

BOY

Here . . . Hurry up.

SINGER (sings)

The first was John of the dimpled chin

“SIX WHO PASS WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL”

The Boy and the Ballad Singer

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

And a fist of iron had he —
He learned to wield the broadsword well
And turned to soldiery.
Tara — da — da, etc.

BOY

Please! Please don't stop.

SINGER

Keep to the bargain.

BOY

Here, take two spoonfuls and finish without stopping.

SINGER (sings rest of ballad)

The second son was christened Hugh And curly locks had he —
He learned to use the tabor and lute
And turned to minstrelsy.
Tara — da — da, etc.

The third was James of the gentle ways
And speech of gold had he —
He learned his psalms and learned his creed
And turned to simony.
Tara — da — da, etc.

The fourth was Dick of the hazel eye,
And a steady hand had he —
With a hammer and saw and a chest of tools
He turned to carpentry.
Tara — da — da, etc.

The fifth was Ned of the velvet tread
And feather fingers had he.
He used his gifts in a naughty way
And turned to burglary.
Tara — da — da, etc.

The sixth was Robin, surnamed the Rare,
For always young was he —
He learned the joy of this sunny world
And turned to poetry.
Tara — da — da, etc.

The Miller approached three score and ten
A happy man was he
His five good sons and the one who was bad,
All turned to gallantry.
Tara — da — da, etc.

BOY

Sing me another.

SINGER

A spoonful at the end of every stanza.

BOY

Don't stop after you begin.

SINGER

Pay me in advance.

BOY

I suppose I'll have to. (He feeds the Ballad-Singer)

SINGER (sings second ballad)

The Ballad of the Three Little Pigs

Two little pigs were pink — pink — pink —
And one little pig was black — black —
The three little pigs were very good friends,
But one little pig was black — black.

Three little pigs would play — play — play —
But one little pig was black — black —
And three little pigs would have a jolly time
Though one little pig was black — black.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

Three little pigs soon grew — grew — grew —
And one little pig was black — black.
The three little pigs became fat hogs —
And one fat hog was black — black.

The two fat hogs were pink — pink — pink —
And one fat hog was black — black.
The three fat hogs all made good ham,
Though one fat hog was black — black.

BOY

Sing me another.

SINGER

I can't. I'm tired.

BOY

Are you going to sing those at the beheading?

SINGER

What beheading?

BOY

At the Queen's beheading.

SINGER

Where?

BOY

Over there.

SINGER

When?

BOY

To-day.

SINGER

I must be going. Certainly I'll sing there and I'll take up a collection.

BOY

It's going to be before the King's four clocks strike twelve.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

SINGER

It's nearly time now. If I can collect a piece of gold I can buy a vermillion robe and sing at the King's court.

BOY

I could collect a pail of gold and two finger rings and sit at the feet of the King if I'd break a promise.

SINGER

Perhaps you will.

BOY

Would you?

SINGER

I'd rather sing along the highway all my life. It is better to dream of a vermillion robe than to have one that is not honestly got.

BOY

The Blindman said something like that.

SINGER

Who said what?

BOY

The Blindman said if I broke a promise I'd never again see a beautiful noble with a golden crown when I closed my eyes.

SINGER

He was right.

BOY

When you get your vermillion robe will you let me see it?

SINGER

That I will . . . Good-bye.

BOY

Good-bye. (Singer goes out)

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

BOY (hums a snatch of the ballads)

[The Headsman steps into the door and plants his axe beside him for an impressive picture. The Boy turns and starts in terror.]

HEADSMAN

Have you seen the Queen?

BOY

Sir?

HEADSMAN

Have you seen the Queen?

BOY

How should I, sir? I've been cooking the lentils.

HEADSMAN

She is here!

BOY

How — could — she — be — here, sir?

HEADSMAN

Well, if she isn't here, where is she?

BOY (relieved)

I don't know where she is if she isn't here, sir.

HEADSMAN

She has too much sense to hide so near the castle and on the short cut to the headsman's block . . . Do you know who I am?

BOY

I think so — sir.

HEADSMAN

Think? Don't you know?

BOY

Yes, sir.

HEADSMAN

Who am I then?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY

You're the Dreadful Headsman.

HEADSMAN

I am the winder of the king's four clocks and when I am needed I am the best headsman in three kingdoms. And this is my axe.

BOY

Is it sharp?

HEADSMAN

It will split a hare in two. (Runs finger near blade meaningly)

BOY

Oh!

HEADSMAN

A hare in two!

BOY

Would you really cut off the Queen's head?

HEADSMAN

That's my business: to cut off heads and the nobler the head the better my business.

BOY

She's such a nice queen.

HEADSMAN

Have you seen her?

BOY

Y — es, sir.

HEADSMAN

When?

BOY

One day — when I was boiling some lentils.

HEADSMAN

Did you see her neck?

BOY

Yes, sir.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

HEADSMAN

Not much bigger than a hair.

BOY (desperately friendly)

Have you seen my knife?

HEADSMAN (sharply)

I'm talking about the Queen and I'm going to talk about myself until I hear the King's trumpeter calling me to the beheading.

BOY

Yes, sir. (Edging between the bench and door of the room where the Queen is hidden)

HEADSMAN

Sit down.

BOY

I' rather stand, sir.

HEADSMAN

Sit down! And I'll tell you how I'm going to behead the Queen.

BOY

You can't behead her after the King's four clocks have struck twelve.

HEADSMAN

How did you know that?

BOY (realizing his blunder)

Well —

HEADSMAN

Nobody knows that except the royal family and people of the court.

BOY

A little — bird told — me.

HEADSMAN

Where is the little bird that I may cut its head off?

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

BOY

Don't hurt the little bird, but tell me how you are going to behead the Queen.

HEADSMAN

Well — (At the stool) This is the block. There's the Queen behind the iron gate. We'll say that door is the gate.

[The Boy starts.

And out there is the crowd. Now, I appear like this and walk up the steps. The crowd cheers, so I bow and show myself and my axe. Then I walk over to the gate —

BOY

Don't go in there. That's my mother's room and you might frighten her.

HEADSMAN

Who's in your mother's room?

BOY

She is.

HEADSMAN

Well, if she's in there, maybe she'd like to hear my story.

BOY

She's in bed.

HEADSMAN

Sick? (The Boy nods vigorously) All right . . . Well, I've bowed to the crowd and I start for the Queen.— If you won't open the door, you pretend you're the Queen.

BOY

I don't want to be the Queen.

HEADSMAN

Come on and pretend. I walk up to the gate — so, and open it and then I say "Your Majesty,

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

I'm going to cut off your head " and she bows
— bow — (The Boy bows) And then I say
" Are you ready? " and she says, " I am ready."
Then I blindfold her —

BOY

Now, don't blindfold me, sir!

HEADSMAN

I'm showing you how it's done.

BOY

But if you blindfold me I can't see when you do it.

HEADSMAN (admitting the point)

All right . . . Then I blindfold her and I lead her to the block and I say, " Have you made your peace with Heaven? " and she says,
" Yes. " . . .

BOY

If you won't tell me any more I'll give you my knife.

HEADSMAN

Aren't you interested?

BOY

Yes, but your axe is so sharp and it might slip.

HEADSMAN

Sharp? It will cut a hair in two, but I know how to handle it . . . Come on . . . (The Boy reluctantly falls into the picture again)
And then . . . (Raising his axe) And then
. . . (Headsmen sees the Butterfly) And then . . . How-d'-ye-do? Butterfly.

[The Boy runs to the pot unnoticed by the Headsmen.]

BOY

Lentils, lentils, boil the time away

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

That my good queen may live to-day.

[The Headsman and the Butterfly are having quite a game.]

Suddenly the great clock begins to strike and the two next larger follow slowly.

The Headsman rushes to the back door with his axe.

HEADSMAN

Why doesn't the trumpeter blow his call!

[The Boy counts the strokes of the clock and as the third clock strikes twelve he rushes to the door of the bedroom.]

BOY

Queen! Queen! It's mid-day.

HEADSMAN

Queen — Queen — (He strides to the bedroom and drags the Queen out) The little clock hasn't struck yet! (He pulls the Queen toward the rear door and shouts) Here! Here! don't let the little clock strike! I've won the pail of gold!

[The Boy has set the bench in the doorway so that the Headsman stumbles. The Butterfly keeps flying against the Headsman's nose, which makes him sneeze.]

BOY

No one heard you!

QUEEN

Let me go! Let me go!

HEADSMAN (sneezing as only a headsman can)

The Queen! The Queen!

[The little clock begins to strike.]

The Boy counts eagerly, one, two, three, etc.

“THE SIX WHO PASS WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL”
The Queen, the defeated Headman, and the Boy

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

Between strokes the Headsman sneezes and shouts.

The Queen! The Queen!

[At the fifth stroke the Headsman falls on his knees. The Queen becomes regal, her foot on his neck.

The Boy kneels at her side.

QUEEN

Base villain! According to the law I am saved! But you are doomed. As Winder of the King's four clocks the law commands that you be decapitated because the four clocks did not strike together. Do you know that law?

HEADSMAN

Oh, Lady, I do, but I did but do my duty. I was sharpening my axe this morning and I couldn't wind the clocks. Intercede for me.

QUEEN

It is useless.

BOY

Is there any other headsman?

QUEEN

The law says the Chief Headsman must behead the chief winder of the King's four clocks.

BOY

Can the Dreadful Headsman behead himself?

QUEEN

Aye, there's the difficulty.

HEADSMAN

Oh, your Majesty, pardon me!

BOY

Yes, pardon him.

PORTMANTEAU PLAYS

QUEEN

On one condition: He is to give his axe to the museum and devote all his old age to the care of the King's four clocks. . . . For myself, I shall pass a law requiring the ladies of the court to wear no jewels. So, if the King's aunt can wear no rings, she assuredly cannot have a ring-toe, and hereafter I may step where I please. . . . Sir Headsman, lead the way. . . . And now, my little boy, to you I grant every Friday afternoon an hour's sport with the Mime, a spotted cow for the little Milkmaid, a cushion and a canopy at the palace gate for the Blindman, a vermilion cloak for the Ballad-Singer, a velvet gown, a silken kerchief and a cloth-of-gold bonnet for your mother, and for yourself a milk-white palfry, two pails of gold, two finger rings, a castle and a sword. . . . Arise, Sir Little Boy. . . . Your arm.

BOY

May I take my knife, your Majesty?

QUEEN

That you may. (He gets the knife and returns to her. She lays her hand on his arm) Sir Headsman, announce our coming.

HEADSMAN

Make way — make way — for her Majesty the Queen.

QUEEN (correcting)

And Sir Little Boy.

HEADSMAN

What's his other name, your Majesty?

BOY (whispering with the wonder of it all)

Davie.

WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

QUEEN (to the Headsman)

Davie.

HEADSMAN

Make way — make way for her Majesty the Queen and Sir Davie Little Boy.

[They go out.

Immediately the Boy returns and gets the pot of lentils and runs after the Queen as

The Curtains Close.

APPENDIX

THE REPERTORY OF THE PORTMAN- TEAU THEATER

IN THE ORDER OF PRODUCTION

THE TRIMPLET	Stuart Walker
A FAN AND TWO CANDLE- STICKS	Mary MacMillan
SIX WHO PASS WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL	Stuart Walker
THE SEVEN GIFTS (A PAN- TOMIME)	Stuart Walker
THE MOON LADY (A PAN- TOMIME)	Stuart Walker
NEVERTHELESS	Stuart Walker
GAMMER GURTON'S NEDLE.	William Stevenson
THE LADY OF THE WEEP- ING WILLOW TREE	Stuart Walker
THE GOLDEN DOOM	Lord Dunsany
VOICES	Hortense Flexner
THE CRIER BY NIGHT	Gordon Bottomley
THE GODS OF THE MOUN- TAIN	Lord Dunsany
THE MEDICINE-SHOW	Stuart Walker
THE VERY NAKED BOY ...	Stuart Walker
THE BIRTHDAY OF THE IN- FANTA (FROM OSCAR WILDE'S STORY)	Stuart Walker
KING ARGIMENES AND THE UNKNOWN WARRIOR ...	Lord Dunsany

APPENDIX

CASTS

At the Thirty-ninth Street Theater, and the Princess Theater, New York City, During November and December of 1916.

PERSONS BEFORE THE PLAYS

MEMORY	Florence Wollersen
THE PROLOGUE	Lew Medbury
THE DEVICE-BEARER	Edmond Crenshaw

THE TRIMPLET

THE LADY CARATINA	Gitruda Tristjanski
THE LADY BOBOLARA	Judith Lowry
THE BARON MILTON-MAURICE	Willard Webster
THE MARQUESS OF STRE-NATHCO	Edgar Stehli
THE PERSON PASSING BY..	McKay Morris
YOU	Gregory Kelly

NEVERTHELESS

A BOY	Gregory Kelly
A GIRL	Nancy Winston
A BURGLAR	McKay Morris

SIX WHO PASS WHILE THE LENTILS BOIL

THE BOY	Gregory Kelly
THE QUEEN	Judith Lowry
THE MIME	Willard Webster
THE MILKMAID	Nancy Winston
THE BLINDMAN	Edgar Stehli
THE BALLAD-SINGER	Stuart Walker
THE HEADSMAN	McKay Morris

APPENDIX

THE MEDICINE-SHOW

The Medicine-Show was not played in New York City.

LUT'ER Willard Webster

GIZ Edgar Stehli

DR. STEV'N VANDEXTER . . . Lew Medbury

A SELECTED LIST OF DRAMATIC LITERATURE

PUBLISHED BY STEWART & KIDD COMPANY
CINCINNATI

Four Plays of the Free Theater

Francois de Curel's The Fossils

Jean Jullien's The Serenade

Georges de Porto-Riche's

Francoise' Luck

Georges Ancey's The Dupe

Translated with an introduction on Antoine and Theatre Libre by BARRETT H. CLARK. Préface by BRIEUX, of the French Academy, and a Sonnet by EDMOND ROSTAND.

The Review of Reviews says:

"A lengthy introduction, which is a gem of condensed information."

H. L. Mencken (in the Smart Set) says:

"Here we have, not only skilful playwriting, but also sound literature."

Brander Matthews says:

"The book is welcome to all students of the modern stage. It contains the fullest account of the activities of Antoine's Free Theater to be found anywhere—even in French."

The Chicago Tribune says:

"Mr. Clark's translations, with their accurate and comprehensive prefaces, are necessary to anyone interested in modern drama . . . If the American reader will forget Yankee notions of morality . . . if the reader will assume the French point of view, this book will prove a rarely valuable experience. Mr. Clark has done this important task excellently."

Handsomely Bound. 12mo. Cloth.....Net, $1.50

Contemporary French Dramatists

By BARRETT H. CLARK

In "Contemporary French Dramatists" Mr. Barrett H. Clark, author of "The Continental Drama of Today," "The British and American Drama of Today," translator of "Four Plays of the Free Theater," and of various plays of Donnay, Hervieu, Lemaître, Sardou, Lavedan, etc., has contributed the first collection of studies on the modern French theater. Mr. Clark takes up the chief dramatists of France beginning with the Théâtre Libre: Cúrel, Brioux, Hervieu, Lemaître, Lavedan, Donnay, Porto-Riche, Rostand, Bataille, Bernstein, Capus, Flers, and Caillavet. The book contains numerous quotations from the chief representative plays of each dramatist, a separate chapter on "Characteristics" and the most complete bibliography to be found anywhere.

This book gives a study of contemporary drama in France which has been more neglected than any other European country.

Independent, New York:

"Almost indispensable to the student of the theater."

Boston Transcript:

*"Mr. Clark's method of analyzing the works of the Playwrights selected is simple and helpful. * * * As a manual for reference or story, 'Contemporary French Dramatists,' with its added bibliographical material, will serve well its purpose."*

Uniform with FOUR PLAYS. Handsomely bound.

ClothNet, $1.50

¾ Maroon Turkey Morocco.....Net, $5.00

The Antigone of Sophocles

By PROF. JOSEPH EDWARD HARRY

An acting version of this most perfect of all dramas. A scholarly work in readable English. Especially adaptable for Colleges, Dramatic Societies, etc.

Post Express, Rochester:

"He has done his work well." "Professor Harry has translated with a virile force that is almost Shakespearean." "The difficult task of rendering the choruses into English lyrical verse has been very creditably accomplished."

Argonaut, San Francisco:

"Professor Harry is a competent translator not only because of his classical knowledge, but also because of a certain enthusiastic sympathy that shows itself in an unfailing choice of words and expression."

North American, Philadelphia:

"Professor Harry, teacher of Greek in the Cincinnati University, has written a new metrical translation of the Antigone of Sophocles. The translation is of fine dramatic quality."

Oregonian, Portland:

"A splendidly executed translation of the celebrated Greek tragedy."

Herald, Boston:

"Scholars will not need to be urged to read this noteworthy piece of literary work, and we hope that many others who have no special scholarly interest will be led to its perusal."

8vo. cloth. Dignified binding.....Net, $1.00

“European Dramatists”

By ARCHIBALD HENDERSON

Author of “George Bernard Shaw: His Life and Works.”

In the present work the famous dramatic critic and biographer of Shaw has considered six representative dramatists outside of the United States, some living, some dead—Strindberg, Ibsen, Maeterlinck, Wilde, Shaw and Barker.

Velma Swanston Howard says:

“Prof. Henderson’s appraisal of Strindberg is certainly the fairest, kindest and most impersonal that I have yet seen. The author has that rare combination of intellectual power and spiritual insight which casts a clear, strong light upon all subjects under his treatment.”

Baltimore Evening Sun:

“Prof. Henderson’s criticism is not only notable for its understanding and good sense, but also for the extraordinary range and accuracy of its information.”

Jeanette L. Gilder, in the Chicago Tribune:

“Henderson is a writer who throws new light on old subjects.”

Chicago Record Herald:

“His essays in interpretation are welcome. Mr. Henderson has a catholic spirit and writes without parochial prejudice—a thing deplorably rare among American critics of the present day. * * * One finds that one agrees with Mr. Henderson’s main contentions and is eager to break a lance with him about minor points, which is only a way of saying that he is stimulating, that he strikes sparks. He knows his age thoroughly and lives in it with eager sympathy and understanding.”

Providence Journal:

“Henderson has done his work, within its obvious limitations, in an exceedingly competent manner. He has the happy faculty of making his biographical treatment interesting, combining the personal facts and a fairly clear and entertaining portrait of the individual with intelligent critical comment on his artistic work.”

Photogravure frontispiece, handsomely printed and bound, large 12mo.....Net, $1.50

At Last
You May Understand
G. B. S.

Perhaps once in a generation a figure of commanding greatness appears, one through whose life the history of his time may be read. There is but one such man to-day.

George Bernard Shaw
HIS LIFE AND WORKS
A CRITICAL BIOGRAPHY (Authorized)
By
ARCHIBALD HENDERSON, M.A.Ph.D.

Is virtually the story of the social, economic and æsthetic life of the last twenty-five years. It is a sympathetic, yet independent interpretation of the most potent individual force in society. Cultivated America will find here the key to all that is baffling and elusive in Shaw; it is a cinematographic picture of his mind with a background disclosing all the formative influences that combined to produce this universal genius.

The press of the world has united in its praise; let us send you some of the comments. It is a large demy 8vo volume cloth, gilt top, 628 pages, with 35 full page illustrations in color, photogravure and halftone and numerous pictures in the text.

$5.00 Net

STEWART & KIDD COMPANY

A FEW CRITICAL REVIEWS OF George Bernard Shaw
HIS LIFE AND WORKS

A CRITICAL BIOGRAPHY (Authorized)

By ARCHIBALD HENDERSON, M.A., PH.D.

The Dial:

"In over five hundred pages, with an energy and carefulness and sympathy which deserve high commendation, Dr. Henderson has presented his subject from all conceivable angles."

The Bookman:

"A more entertaining narrative, whether in biography or fiction, has not appeared in recent years."

The Independent:

"Whatever George Bernard Shaw may think of his Biography the rest of the world will probably agree that Dr. Henderson has done a good job."

Boston Transcript:

"There is no exaggeration in saying it is one of the most entertaining biographies of these opening years of the Twentieth Century."

Bernard Shaw:

"You are a genius, because you are somehow susceptible to the really significant and differentiating traits and utterances of your subject."

Maurice Maeterlinck:

"You have written one of the most sagacious, most acute and most penetrating essays in the whole modern moment."

Edwin Markham:

"He stands to-day as the chief literary critic of the South, and in the very forefront of the critics of the nation."

William Lyon Phelps:

"Your critical biography of Shaw is a really great work."

Richard Burton:

"In over five hundred pages, with an energy and carefulness and sympathy which deserves high commendation, Dr. Henderson has presented his subject from all conceivable angles. * * * Intensely interesting * * * sound and brilliant, full of keen insight and happy turns of statement. * * * This service Professor Henderson's book does perform; and I incline to call it a great one."

Short Plays

By MARY MAC MILLAN

To fill a long-felt want. All have been successfully presented. Suitable for Women's Clubs, Girls' Schools, etc. While elaborate enough for big presentation, they may be given very simply.

Review of Reviews:

"Mary MacMillan offers 'SHORT PLAYS,' a collection of pleasant one to three-act plays for women's clubs, girls' schools, and home parlor production. Some are pure comedies, others gentle satires on women's faults and foibles. 'The Futurists,' a skit on a woman's club in the year 1882, is highly amusing. 'Entr' Act' is a charming trifle that brings two quarreling lovers together through a ridiculous private theatrical. 'The Ring' carries us gracefully back to the days of Shakespeare; and 'The Shadowed Star,' the best of the collection, is a Christmas Eve tragedy. The Star is shadowed by our thoughtless inhumanity to those who serve us and our forgetfulness of the needy. The Old Woman, gone daft, who babbles in a kind of mongrel Kiltartan, of the Shepherds, the Blessed Babe, of the Fairies, rowan berries, roses and dancing, while her daughter dies on Christmas Eve, is a splendid characterization."

Boston Transcript:

"Those who consigned the writer of these plays to solitude and prison fare evidently knew that 'needs must' is a sharp stimulus to high powers. If we find humor, gay or rich. if we find brilliant wit; if we find constructive ability joined with dialogue which moves like an arrow; if we find delicate and keen characterization, with a touch of genius in the choice of names; if we find poetic power which moves on easy wing—the gentle jailers of the writer are justified, and the gentle reader thanks their severity."

Salt Lake Tribune:

"The Plays are ten in number, all of goodly length. We prophesy great things for this gifted dramatist."

Bookseller, News Dealer & Stationer:

"The dialogue is permeated with graceful satire, snatches of wit, picturesque phraseology, and tender, often exquisite, expressions of sentiment."

Handsomely Bound. 12mo. Cloth.....Net, $1.25

The Gift

A POETIC DRAMA

By MARGARET DOUGLAS ROGERS

A dramatic poem in two acts, treating in altogether new fashion the world old story of Pandora, the first woman.

New Haven Times Leader:

"Well written and attractive."

Evangelical Messenger:

"A very beautifully written portrayal of the old story of Pandora."

Rochester Post Dispatch:

"There is much poetic feeling in the treatment of the subject."

Grand Rapids Herald:

"THE GIFT, dealing with this ever interesting mythological story, is a valuable addition to the dramas of the day."

St. Xavier Calendar:

"The story of Pandora is so set down as to bring out its stage possibilities. Told by Mrs. Rogers in exquisite language."

Salt Lake Tribune:

"The tale is charmingly wrought and has possibilities as a simple dramatic production, as well as being a delightful morsel of light reading."

Cincinnati Enquirer:

"The love story is delightfully told and the dramatic action of the play is swift and strong."

Buffalo Express:

"It is a delightful bit of fancy with a dramatic and poetic setting."

Boston Woman's Journal:

"Epimetheus and Pandora and her box are charmingly presented."

Worcester Gazette:

"It is absolutely refreshing to find a writer willing to risk a venture harking back to the times of the Muses and the other worthies of mythological fame. * * * The story of Pandora's box told in verse by a woman. It may be said it could not have been better written had a representative of the one who only assisted at the opening been responsible for the play."

Handsomely bound silk cloth.....Net, $1.00

Lucky Pehr

By AUGUST STRINDBERG

*Authorized Translation by Velma Swanston Howard.
An allegorical drama in five acts. Compared favorably to Barrie's "Peter Pan" and Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird."*

Rochester Post Express:

Strindberg has written many plays which might be described as realistic nightmares. But this remark does not apply to "Lucky Pehr." * * * This drama is one of the most favorable specimens of Strindberg's genius.

New York World:

"Pehr" is lucky because, having tested all things, he finds that only love and duty are true.

New York Times:

"Lucky Pehr" clothes cynicism in real entertainment instead of in gloom. And it has its surprises. Can this be August Strindberg, who ends his drama so sweetly on the note of the woman-soul, leading upward and on?

Worcester Gazette:

From a city of Ohio comes this product of Swedish fancy in most attractive attire, attesting that the possibilities of dramatic art have not entirely ceased in this age of vaudeville and moving pictures. A great sermon in altruism is preached in these pages, which we would that millions might see and hear. To those who think or would like to think, "Lucky Pehr" will prove a most readable book. * * * An allegory, it is true, but so are Æsop's Fables, the Parables of the Scriptures and many others of the most effective lessons ever given.

Boston Globe:

A popular drama. * * * There is no doubt about the book being a delightful companion in the library. In charm of fancy and grace of imagery the story may not be unfairly classed with "The Blue Bird" and "Peter Pan."

Photogravure frontispiece of Strindberg etched by Zorn. Also, a reproduction of Velma Swanston Howard's authorization.

Handsomely bound. Gilt top.....Net, $1.50

Easter

(A PLAY IN THREE ACTS)

AND STORIES BY AUGUST STRINDBERG

Authorized translation by Velma Swanston Howard. In this work the author reveals a broad tolerance, a rare poetic tenderness augmented by an almost divine understanding of human frailties as marking certain natural stages in evolution of the soul.

Louisville Courier-Journal:

Here is a major key of cheerfulness and idealism—a relief to a reader who has passed through some of the author's morbid pages. * * * Some critics find in this play (Easter) less of the thrust of a distinctive art than is found in the author's more lugubrious dramas. There is indeed less sting in it. Nevertheless it has a nobler tone. It more ably fulfills the purpose of good drama—the chastening of the spectators' hearts through their participation in the suffering of the dramatic personages. There is in the play a mystical exaltation, a belief and trust in good and its power to embrace all in its beneficence, to bring all confusion to harmony.

The Nation:

Those who like the variety of symbolism which Maeterlinck has often employed—most notably in the "Bluebird"—will turn with pleasure to the short stories of Strindberg which Mrs. Howard has included in her volume. * * * They are one and all diverting on account of the author's facility in dealing with fanciful details.

Bookseller:

"Easter" is a play of six characters illustrative of human frailties and the effect of the divine power of tolerance and charity. * * * There is a symbolism, a poetic quality, a spiritual insight in the author's work that make a direct appeal to the cultured. * * *

The Dial:

One play from his (Strindberg's) third, or symbolistic period stands almost alone. This is "Easter." There is a sweet, sane, life-giving spirit about it.

Photogravure frontispiece of Strindberg etched by Zorn. Also, a reproduction of Velma Swanston Howard's authorization.

Handsomely bound. Gilt top.....Net, $1.50

On the Seaboard

By AUGUST STRINDBERG

The Author's greatest psychological novel. Authorized Translation by Elizabeth Clarke Westergren.

American-Scandinavian Review:

"The description of Swedish life and Swedish scenery makes one positively homesick for the Skargard and its moods.

Worcester Evening Gazette:

"Classes in Psychology in colleges, and Medical students considering Pathology would derive much information from the observations and reflections of the commissioner who holds the front of the stage whereon are presented sciences as new to the readers of to-day as were those which Frederick Bremer unfolded to the fathers and mothers of critics and observers in this first quarter of the Twentieth Century."

Detroit Tribune:

"Hans Land pronounced this novel to be the only work of art in the domain of Nietzschean morals yet written which is destined to endure."

Cincinnati Times-Star:

"It requires a book such as 'ON THE SEABOARD' to show just how profound an intellect was housed in the frame of this great Swedish writer."

New Haven Leader:

"His delineations are photographic exactness without retouching, and bear always a strong reflection of his personality."

Indianapolis News:

"The story is wonderfully built and conceived and holds the interest tight."

American Review of Reviews:

"This version is characterized by the fortunate use of idiom, a delicacy in the choice of words, and great beauty in the rendering of descriptive passages, the translation itself often attaining the melody of poetry * * * You may read and re-read it, and every reading will fascinate the mind from a fresh angle."

South Atlantic Quarterly:

"Only a most unusual man, a genius, could have written this book, and it is distinctly worth reading."

Handsomely bound, uniform with Lucky Pehr and EasterNet, $1.25

The Hamlet Problem and Its Solution

By EMERSON VENABLE

The tragedy of Hamlet has never been adequately interpreted. Two hundred years of critical discussion has not sufficed to reconcile conflicting impressions regarding the scope of Shakespeare's design in this, the first of his great philosophic tragedies. We believe that all those students who are interested in the study of Shakespeare will find this volume of great value.

The Louisville Courier-Journal:

"Mr. Venable's Hamlet is a 'protagonist of a drama of triumphant moral achievement.' He rises through the play from an elected agent of vengeance to a man gravely impressed with 'an imperative sense of moral obligation, tragic in its depth, felt toward the world.'"

E. H. Sothern:

"Your ideas of Hamlet so entirely agree with my own that the book has been a real delight to me. I have always had exactly this feeling about the character of Hamlet. I think you have wiped away a great many cobwebs, and I believe your book will prove to be most convincing to many people who may yet be a trifle in the dark."

The Book News Monthly:

"Mr. Venable is the latest critic to apply himself to the 'Hamlet' problem, and he offers a solution in an admirably written little book which is sure to attract readers. Undeterred by the formidable names of Goethe and Coleridge, Mr. Venable pronounces untenable the theories which those great authors propounded to account for the extraordinary figure of the Prince of Denmark. * * * Mr. Venable looks in another direction for the solution of the problem. * * * The solution offered by the author is just the reverse of that proposed by Goethe. * * * From Mr. Venable's viewpoint the key to 'Hamlet' is found in the famous soliloquies, and his book is based upon a close study of those utterances which bring us within the portals of the soul of the real Hamlet. The reader with an open mind will find in Mr. Venable a writer whose breadth of view and searching thought gives weight to this competent study of the most interesting of Shakespearean problems."

16mo. Silk cloth.....Net, $1.00

The Truth About The Theater

Anonymous

Precisely what the title indicates — facts as they are, plain and unmistakable without veneer of any sort. It goes directly to the heart of the whole matter. Behind the writer of it — who is one of the best known theatrical men in New York — are long years of experience. He recites what he knows, what he has seen, and his quiet, calm, authoritative account of conditions as they are is without adornment, excuse or exaggeration. It is intended to be helpful to those who want the facts, and for them it will prove of immeasurable value.

"The Truth About the Theater," in brief, lifts the curtain on the American stage. It leaves no phase of the subject untouched. To those who are ambitious to serve the theater, either as players or as playwrights, or, again, in some managerial capacity, the book is invaluable. To those, too, who would know more about the theater that they may come to some fair estimate of the worth of the innumerable theories nowadays advanced, the book will again prove its value.

New York Herald:

Whether the book is too severe or not, it is refreshing to read about the stage, not through the customary glamor or through the tawdry exaggeration of the press agent, but in the light of common day.

Louisville Courier-Journal:

The author shatters cherished illusions unmercifully. Such a book is helpful. It should be universally read and believed.

12mo. silk cloth. Gilt top.....Net $1.00

Plays and Players

LEAVES FROM A CRITIC'S SCRAPBOOK

BY WALTER PRICHARD EATON

PREFACE BY BARRETT H. CLARK

A new volume of criticisms of plays and papers on acting, play-making, and other dramatic problems, by Walter Prichard Eaton, dramatic critic, and author of "The American Stage of To-day," "At the New Theater and Others," "Idyl of the Twin Fires," etc. The new volume begins with plays produced as far back as 1910, and brings the record down to the current year. One section is devoted to American plays, one to foreign plays acted on our stage, one to various revivals of Shakespeare. These sections form a record of the important activities of the American theater for the past six years, and constitute about half of the volume. The remainder of the book is given over to various discussions of the actor's art, of play construction, of the new stage craft, of new movements in our theater, such as the Washington Square Players, and several lighter essays in the satiric vein which characterized the author's work when he was the dramatic critic of the New York Sun. Unlike most volumes of criticisms, this one is illustrated, the pictures of the productions described in the text furnishing an additional historical record. At a time when the drama is regaining its lost position of literary dignity it is particularly fitting that dignified and intelligent criticism and discussion should also find accompanying publication.

Toronto Saturday Night:

Mr. Eaton writes well and with dignity and independence. His book should find favor with the more serious students of the Drama of the Day.

Detroit Free Press:

This is one of the most interesting and also valuable books on the modern drama that we have encountered in that period popularly referred to as "a dog's age." Mr. Eaton is a competent and well-esteemed critic. The book is a record of the activities of the American stage since 1910, down to the present. Mr. Eaton succinctly restores the play to the memory, revisualizes the actors, and puts the kernel of it into a nutshell for us to ponder over and by which to correct our impressions.

Large 12mo. About 420 pages, 10 full-page illustrations on Cameo Paper and End Papers.....Net $2.00
Gilt top. ¾ Maroon Turkey Morocco.....Net 6.50

Comedies of Words and Other Plays

BY ARTHUR SCHNITZLER

TRANSLATED BY PIERRE LOVING

The contents are { "The Hour of Recognition"
"Great Scenes"
"The Festival of Bacchus"
"His Helpmate"
"Literature."

In his "Comedies of Words," Arthur Schnitzler, the great Austrian Dramatist, has penetrated to newer and profounder regions of human psychology. According to Schnitzler, the keenly compelling problems of earth are: the adjustment of a man to one woman, a woman to one man, the children to their parents, the artist to life, the individual to his most cherished beliefs, and how can we accomplish this adjustment when, try as we please, there is a destiny which sweeps our little plans away like helpless chessmen from the board? Since the creation of Anatol, that delightful toy philosopher, so popular in almost every theater of the world, the great Physician-Dramatist has pushed on both as World-Dramatist and reconnoiterer beyond the misty frontiers of man's conscious existence. He has attempted in an artistic way to get beneath what Freud calls the "Psychic Censor" which edits all our suppressed desires. Reading Schnitzler is like going to school to Life itself!

Bound uniform with the S & K Dramatic Series, Net $1.50

